ABOUT THAT HOUSING CRISIS. With the south end of the Island filling up so quickly, how about taking a lead from the car industry and building compact models? Or if that isn't what's going on here, then maybe some housing contractor has come up with a couple of giants, hence avoiding a big payroll. Actually, it's convicts from William Head finishing paint and stucco work on a scale-model bungalow; a shop project to add some authenticity to the Lions Club Tom Thumb safety village by the swimming pool in Colwood. Two U.S. Carriers Join Laos Fight

Tonkin Raids Launched

SAIGON (AP) — Two United States carriers with about 170 warplanes are adding their entire striking capability to air force efforts to cut North Vietnamese supply and troop infiltration corridors in Laos, informed U.S. sources in South Vietnam said tonight.

A spokesman for the U.S. 7th Fleet said no navy bombing raids had been flown against North Vietnamese positions in South Vietnam since Feb. 15. The two carriers are based in the Gulf of Tonkin.

Other sources said all of the navy air strikes are being flown in Laos, but declined to give specific target areas. The U.S. command has a policy of reporting only bombing missions in South Vietnam.

While Communist action in South Vietnam remained at one of its lowest levels of the year, attention centred on the massive American air campaign in Laos.

The aim is to slow a North Vietnamese offensive in the Plaine des Jarres area and to forestall a North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam by cutting the Ho Chi Minh Trail in eastern Laos. The North Vietnamese move war materiels and troops into South Vietnam over the Trail.

Meanwhile the North Vietnamese-Pathet Lao offensive rolled on unchecked as the defenders of Muong Soui and their families straggled back to Gen Vang Pao's headquarters at Long Cheng, 35 miles to the south.

Vang Pao is reported to have planned to reinforce the strategic mile-long airstrip and the town of Muong Soui with a battalion from the 10,000 Meo tribesmen he commands, but changed his mind when enemy ground fire prevented troop-carrying planes from landing at the field.

RATE BOOST ENSURES 'BEST FOR PROVINCE'

Effective April 1:

- Bus fares for adults will be 25 cents.
- Domestic power rates will increase an average of 15 per cent.

In accepting the rate boosts, Premier Bennett said he is working to give British Columbia "the highest and best standard of living in the world."

Kidnapped Pair Found Unharmed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The FBI reported today it found unharmed two little sisters kidnapped in Alabama and arrested one of two men charged with abducting them.

John Charles Messick, 22, of Tucson, Ariz., was arrested about 2:30 a.m. at the home of a distant relative in Liberty, Mo., a Kansas City suburb, the FBI said.

With him, the FBI reported, were three-year-old Tina Cain and her two-year-old sister, Tiffany, the daughters of an oil worker from Butler, Ala.

Donald Bradford Lee Jones, 23, also charged in state and federal kidnapping warrants issued Tuesday night in connection with the Monday abduction, was still being sought.

POILE HIRED, CROZIER FIRED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Crozier was fired by the National-Hockey-League bound Vancouver Canucks today for "rank insubordination" and replaced as coach and general manager by Bud Poile, late of the Philadelphia Flyers.

Thomas K. Scallen, Canucks' president, told a news conference the club had planned to retain Crozier as coach and general manager with Poile as "assistant to the president with responsibility for overall supervision."

Guerrillas May Halt Air Sabotage

Times News Services

Arab guerrilla organizations urgently reviewed today their policy of striking at Israel by attacking civilian aircraft abroad, a review brought on by the growing world-wide campaign to safeguard air travel from sabotage and hijackings.

At the United Nations in New York, Secretary-General Thant planned to hold priority talks with key delegates and his own top aides on the air security issue. He returned to New York Tuesday night after cutting short a visit to Burma.

The United States threw its weight behind calls by Israel, Switzerland and other countries for emergency talks on air security following the crash Saturday of a Swissair jetliner, killing 47 persons, and an explosion aboard an Austrian airliner the same day.

OTTAWA AGREES

In Ottawa, Transport Minister Don Jamieson told the Commons that Canada will take part in any talks initiated by any country to safeguard air travel.

In Montreal, meanwhile, a spokesman for Air Canada said that a 48-hour embargo has been placed on all freight destined for Israel.

The spokesman said the embargo, which began earlier Tuesday, includes "unaccompanied luggage."

Pompidou Stresses Mid-East

WASHINGTON (UPI)— French President Georges Pompidou told a joint session of Congress today that a Middle East peace settlement must include a renunciation of force by both sides and a solution to the problem of the Arab refugees from Palestine.

He told the senators and house members that France reaffirms "the right of the state of Israel not only to existence but also to security" from its Arab neighbors.

Pompidou made the Middle East situation a highlight of his prepared speech to congress but he also touched on the outlook for the United States in the Vietnam war.

He said that the French government has at times regretted the length of the negotiations and "wondered whether the paths followed had always been the speediest and surest."

"But I know, from having observed it just yesterday, the will to peace which guides the president of the United States," the French leader said.

IN MIND

Pompidou made no specific references to French experiences in fighting in Vietnam and Algiers but he apparently had them in mind as he gave this word of advice to the United States regarding Vietnam.

"I know — because France has experienced it—how difficult it is to end such conflicts and that the stronger a people, the greater the effort required, but also the greater the honor won. Allow me, as a friend, to tell you that the end of the war in Vietnam, for the United States, will be the most precious of victories — a victory won first over oneself."

The French president, who has been assailed in this country for the sale of Mirage jet planes to Libya, said in his discussion of the Middle East that Israel had achieved "undeniable success on the battlefield."

Bank Robbers Snatch $7M

TORONTO (CP) — Bank robbers took nearly $7,000,000 from a branch of the Bank of Montreal at Bay and Breadalbane streets in midtown Toronto today. Early reports said three men were involved in the theft of $52,255 in cash and about $6,744,000 in cheques.

NUCLEAR POWER PLANT ON ISLAND

Bennett Seeks Ottawa Aid

B.C. is asking Ottawa for help in a proposal to build a nuclear power generating station on southern Vancouver Island, Premier W. A. C. Bennett said in the legislature Tuesday.

B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said later the $150 million plant, a public proposal of his for some years, might be built in the Duncan area to provide power to Vancouver Island and surplus for the lower mainland. It could be in operation by 1976.

The plant would produce 500,000 kilowatts of power annually.

Ottawa will be asked for low-cost loans to aid in the construction. Similar help has been made available to Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba, Shrum said.

CLOSE TO LINES

The Duncan area would provide a site close to power transmission lines linking Vancouver Island with the Lower mainland.

Shrum said the nuclear plant would produce no danger from wastes and excess heat could be used for fish propagation or greenhouse heating.

Nuclear power appears to be the only solution to the growing need for power on Vancouver Island, where available new power sources are limited, Shrum said.

"The only other source of power left is thermal," Shrum said, pointing out that coal would have to be brought in from the East Kootenays for thermal generating plants. Air pollution would be a hazard, he added.

There is no air pollution from nuclear plants and the byproduct, plutonium, can be sold to other countries using different types of atomic reactors, he said.

There is some doubt B.C. could proceed with a nuclear plant without Ottawa's help, Shrum said, adding that Ottawa wishes to promote sale of its Atomic Energy Commission-developed reactors.

Radiation from the reactor is comparable to the radiation "you would get from a partner sleeping in a double bed," Shrum said, adding "you could safely lean up against the side of one of those reactors for your whole lifetime."

'WARM UP' FISH

Heat from a reactor, which might be a problem in a hot, dry climate such as that in the Interior, could be used to heat greenhouses or warm up cold coastal waters to aid fish propagation, he suggested.

It would take about six years to build a nuclear plant, Shrum said.

Ontario has one 200,000 kilowatt nuclear plant in operation, Shrum said.

Bennett said the official request for aid to Ottawa has not yet been made and that Hydro still has the engineering details under study.

Asked how firm the government is on a nuclear plant at this stage, Bennett replied: "This is the first time I've announced it in the legislature."

COST FAVORABLE

He made his remarks after both Opposition Leader Dave Barrett and Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby Edmonds) had asked whether the government is considering a nuclear power plant.

Dowding said electric power generated by nuclear plants could be produced at a three to four mill cost, comparing favorably with sources such as Peace River power which has to be delivered over long distances.

A little more than half of the power used on Vancouver Island currently is generated on the Island, mostly at the

U.S. Tries to Stop N-Power Pollution

MIAMI (WP) — The U.S. government and the nuclear power industry Tuesday headed for a showdown in court which has vast implications for the campaign to reclaim the United States environment.

The interior department, in a precedent setting step, threatened to sue the Florida Power and Light Co. to keep it from overheating Biscayne Bay with water discharged from its electricity-making plant at Turkey Point near here.

In doing so, interior served notice that power plants all over the United States are apt to be sued for thermal pollution—the practice of dumping so much heated water into a stream, lake or bay that the aquatic life cannot stand the increase in temperature.

The federal water pollution control administration, an arm of the interior department, charged Tuesday at a conservation hearing that warm water coming from Flordia Power and Light's Turkey Point plant had caused severe damage over an area of 670 acres.

FISH KILLED

Fish and shell fish were killed and plant life diseased as temperatures rose 10 degrees above normal in the bay, the agency reported.

The Florida case is the first time the U.S. government has attacked thermal pollution in a formal action. President Nixon is asking for authority to police all navigable waters, not just interstate ones, in a bill before Congress.

Electric power companies use tons of water everyday for cooling and then return it to the source heated up. The nation's growing demand for electricity will accentuate the thermal pollution problem.

Florida Power and Light attacked the federal report, contending there was no hard evidence that its thermal discharges had hurt marine life.

PRISONERS MAY GET 'LEAVE' IN NEW CORRECTIONS ACT

A bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday night changes the name of provincial jails to "correctional centres" and provides increased freedom for rehabilitation of prisoners.

One section of the bill, the new Corrections Act, would enable certain prisoners be granted leave from a correctional centre, with or without escort, for "medical, educational or humanitarian reasons to assist in the rehabilitation of the inmate."

A limit of 15 days' leave applies for "humanitarian" reasons but educational or medical leave could be unlimited.

Another section would enable prisoners to take "gainful employment for wages" outside the centre for "specified periods" with the money to be used under guidance of the warden for support of the inmates' dependants or to cover costs of his travel, meals, cost of keep at the centre or other expenses.

Attorney-General Peterson, asked if the bill allowed for conjugal visits for prisoners, said it would be up to the discretion of the director of corrections.

Peterson said his department tried to make the act the most modern of its kind anywhere and described it as a consolidation of a number of improvements which have been in progress for some time.

The bill brings the probation, correctional and parole services under one agency, the B.C. Corrections Service.

He said the "greatest" emphasis of the three elements will be on probation.

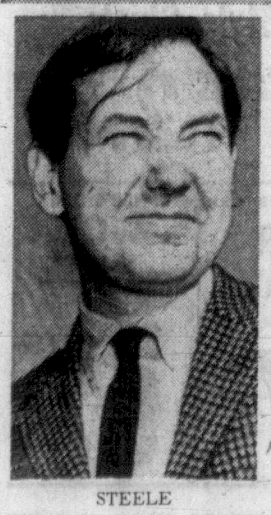
CARLETON CRITICS CHARGE

Uvic President Choice 'Insult to Canadians'



STEELE

By BOB MITCHELL

Hiring American administrators to head two B.C. universities was a "distinct insult to Canadians and the Canadian academic community," Carleton University English teacher Robin Matthews said here today.

Matthews, who arrived with colleague James Steele, was referring to appointments of University of Victoria president Dr. Bruce Partridge and Simon Fraser University president Dr. Kenneth Strand.

The two professors from Ottawa's Carleton University have been in the news for the last 18 months since proposing that two-thirds of faculty members at all Canadian universities should be Canadian, by birth or citizenship.

Just under 50 per cent of university teaching positions are now held by Canadians.

Uvic and SFU are the only universities in Canada with non-Canadian presidents.

"I don't think any more American presidents will be appointed," Matthews said, referring to publicity given the work of a committee of academics which was formed to study "de-Canadianization" of campuses.

"In recent years Canadian universities have been accepting American qualifications.

"Life-long experience in Canada was not a qualification.

"President Partridge is one of those men who just shouldn't have been hired."

Matthews said hiring Partridge was an insult to Canadians because the university, in effect, was saying no Canadian was good enough to be president of Uvic.

"When President Partridge was hired I wrote two letters . . . and asked them what the qualifications were they had considered, . . . and the chancellor of the University of Victoria did not deign to reply."

Matthews and Steele both spent their early years in British Columbia. Matthews, a UBC grad, was born at Powell River. Steele, a Trinity College grad, attended elementary school at Ucluelet.

This is the first time they have come to B.C. in their campaign to focus attention on effects of the large proportion of non-Canadians in the universities.

They spoke Tuesday at UBC and were to address students and faculty members at Uvic today.

Steele said one of their aims is to make it mandatory for all university officials from chancellor down to department chairmen to be

U.S. Also Challenging Coast Areas

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's sovereign rights in two widely-separated coastal areas were the subject of exchanges in the Commons Tuesday.

Concern about possible encroachment by the United States in both areas was accompanied by renewed opposition demands that the government take a stronger stand on sovereignty.

Also in dispute are areas around Alaska. No details were given.

Prime Minister Trudeau agreed under opposition questioning that External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp expressed government policy last week when he referred to waters between the Canadian Arctic islands as "our waters."

The prime minister told New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas that Mr. Sharp was speaking for the government.

Arctic sovereignty has been a recurring issue since it was learned the giant U.S. oil tanker Manhattan may make a second voyage through northern waters in April. She sailed the North west Passage last summer with the aid of a Canadian icebreaker.

ASSURES HOUSE

Mr. Trudeau also assured the Commons Canada has taken a strong stand in negotiations with the U.S. over an area of the Continental Shelf off the East Coast.

The area is between the Bay of Fundy and Cape Cod and includes Georges Bank.

A public notice issued in Washington Feb. 12 by Elliot Richardson, acting state secretary, said the U.S. does not "acquiesce in or recognize the validity" of permits issued by Canada to explore for natural resources in the area.

Canada has been issuing oil exploration permits for the area for some six years.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Tuesday whether the government made a formal reply to a note from the U.S. government last November disputing Canadian territorial rights in the Georges Bank area.

Mr. Trudeau said there had been an exchange between the two countries on the matter and the Canadian position was clear.

CONVENTION COVERS

The Geneva convention provided for a median line to apply in such cases. Canadian exploration permits had only been granted for areas of the shelf inside this line.

But the U.S. disagreed with the median-line principle in this case, Mr. Trudeau said, saying there were special circumstances because of the shape of the Continental Shelf.

A spokesman for the external affairs department said earlier that Canada and the U.S. will meet within two months to attempt to settle the dispute.

Opposition Leader Stanfield told reporters outside the House that Canada should make its position known on all sovereignty matters and "stand by it."

He said the U.S. would not respect Canada if the government did not take such a stand, on both the Georges Bank and the Arctic waters question.

QUESTIONS CLAIM

Mr. Douglas had asked whether Mr. Trudeau is aware that a prominent U.S. official had said recently Canadian territory extended only three miles from land in Arctic waters. Mr. Trudeau said he was not aware of the statement.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said no Canadian icebreakers would be provided to aid the Manhattan unless the ship meets with anti-pollution regulations the government plans to introduce as legislation shortly.

BC. Senator Farris Dies In Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP) — Senator J. Wallace de Beque Farris, Canada's second senior senator and one-time British Columbia attorney-general and labor minister, died today in hospitl. He was 91.

Born Dec. 3, 1878 at White's Cove, N.B., Senator Farris was the son of the late Hon. Lauchlan P. Farris and M. Louise (Hay) Farris.

He attended St. Martin's Seminary, at St. Martin's, N.B., Acadia University and the University of Pennsylvania where he obtained BA and LlB degrees.

Senator Farris was called to the B.C. bar in 1903 and elected to the B.C. legislature as a member of the Liberal party in 1916.

He served as president of the executive council in 1917 and in the same year appointed attorney-general and minister of labor for the province.

He resigned both portfolios Jan. 31, 1922, to resume practice as a barrister and was defeated in the provincial general election of 1924.

He was honorary member of the American Bar Association, honorary member of Vancouver Bar Association and honorary member of the Vancouver Board of Trade.

He was summoned to serve in the Senate of Canada Jan. 9, 1937.

Too Possessive of Resources—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau feels Canada may miss the economic boat if the country refuses to consider sale of natural resources to the United States.

In a lively television taping session Tuesday held before an audience of 500 university students, Mr. Trudeau fielded questions from a three-student panel and also from the auditorium floor.

They covered such things as a move to a presidential system, racial segregation and foreign ownership as well as the handling of Canada's resources.

The interview was taped for the syndicated television program Under Attack.

On the question of allowing some of Canada's natural resources to be sold to the United States, Mr. Trudeau said there is a danger of Canada "being too possessive" of these resources.

He stressed that there should be no sale of resources until Canada had first taken a complete inventory, setting out Canadian needs for the future.

But if it was shown that certain resources were unlikely to be used domestically, he said, "why not sell them for good hard cash?"

The danger in jealously hoarding resources was that they could become outdated white elephants, no longer in demand. Mr. Trudeau said oil might be such a commodity.

Discussion of resources led to questions of Canadian sovereignty in the North, where large oil deposits have already been discovered, and the question of possible pollution in the extraction and transportation of such resources.

Mr. Trudeau said some Canadians "tend to be carried away by the territorial imperative" in discussing Arctic sovereignty.

Why were these people so worried? Did they believe other nations were going to flock to the Canadian Arctic and chip away pieces of the ice?

The question of northern pollution was a legitimate concern. But Mr. Trudeau asked whether it necessitated Canada's staking out a territorial claim and going to some court to uphold it.

The best Canadian approach in the North was to ensure that "tin cans" loaded with oil were not allowed to create pollution that would upset the environment.

This was an apparent reference to the government's announced intention to draft standards for ships using Canadian waters as an anti-pollution measure.

Canadian citizens.

Reason for the requirement is the fact administrators have considerable legislative power within the university structure, particularly with regard to hiring procedure.

There was much initial hostility to the two professors' proposals, especially where they implied asserting sovereignty.

Steele said today they are getting growing public support for their stand.

More significantly, students are expressing concern over lack of Canadian content in certain courses in humanities and social sciences.

Steele said a survey carried out by York students showed that of 259 textbooks used in humanities courses, only five were written by Canadian authors.

Steele conceded foreign teachers are a valuable segment of any university faculty —they provide students with a wide variety of points of view.

He pointed out a maximum one-third allowance of non-Canadians would be the most liberal in the world.

"This would give us the largest proportion of foreign scholars of any university system in the world."

Figures released by Uvic last fall showed 44 per cent of the faculty is Canadian by citizenship, 29 per cent American, 21.5 per cent British, and 5.5. per cent other nationalities.

"It's important not to overemphasize American influence per se," Steele said.

"They probably make up no more than 10 or 12 per cent of the annual influx into new positions into the universities.

"We've never talked about Americanization of the universities—we're calling it de-Canadianization."

The other half of the power needs are supplied from the mainland by way of a direct current cable across Georgia Strait near Duncan.

A $9.5 million dam expected to be completed at Jordan River in 1971 will add 150,000 kilowatts to Vancouver Island's supply but will be used mainly for peak needs. Shrum said developments such as the Utah copper mine near Port Hardy will contribute to a big growth in power needs.

Drag Races Lead To 90 Charges

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — Burnaby RCMP said today they have laid a total of 90 charges against car drivers who took part in a series of organized drag races Saturday night and Sunday morning.

An RCMP spokesman said the charges range from illegal parking to dangerous driving. He said there is no indication as to when the drivers will appear in court.

The series of races started about 10 p.m. using portable electronic timing devices set up at marked spots on a four-lane highway leading up to Simon Fraser University.

The RCMP check had to adopt cloak-and-dagger tactics as the drag racers were ready for them.

Police said drivers had intercom radio sets for communications and had spotters so equipped for miles on each side of the impromptu drag-strip to warn of the approach of police cars or known police officers.

RCMP reported they were forced to crawl through thick bush in the area and leave unmarked cars a distance away in order to get close enough to the scene to get licence plate numbers, colors and descriptions of the cars involved.

In the event of warnings of police in the area in previous checks the portable gear and other equipment was hastily picked up and the operation "just faded out of sight," the RCMP spokesman said.

RCMP said an attempt will be made to put an end to such events because numerous accidents have occurred as a result of the drag racing.

Police said they seized tape recordings, films and a book of names from a posh basement den in the home. Detectives said the den was equipped with a peephole mirror.

Tough Assignment

EDMONTON (CP) — The department of highways should employ medical examiners to tell old people when they are no longer fit to drive a car, Dr. Dan Bouvier (SC—Lac La Biche) told the legislature Tuesday.

He said a family doctor is put in a difficult position in trying to determine whether a patient should be allowed to keep his driving licence.

It was even more difficult when the doctor was also the MLA, he said.

Rings Stolen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police in Vancouver were seeking a man who stole a case of diamond rings from Henry Birks and Sons' jewelry store.

A spokesman at the store, located on a busy mid-downtown intersection, said the ring case contained 24 diamond rings valued at more than $20,000.

The spokesman said a man asked to see a ring from a display window and when the salesman went to fetch it the man snatched a case of rings and fled into the street.

Motives Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Blackmail or jealousy have not been discounted as possible motives in the Feb. 17 slaying of a city couple, homicide detectives said today.

Police were seeking a man described as six feet tall with a crewcut hair style.

Pacific Press, Unions Plan Victoria Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks are to start Friday in Victoria between representatives of Pacific Press Ltd., which produces The Sun and The Province, and four international unions inolved in a contract dispute.

A brief union announcement released here today said Ed Benson, vice-president and general manager of Pacific Press, will head the company negotiators.

Representing the unions will be C. A. Perlik, Jr., president of the American Newspaper Guild, John J. Pilch, prsident of the International Typographical Union, Robert Brown, vice-president of the International Printing Pressmen, and a representative of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers Union.

A company spokesman said the talks were requested by Pilch. He said the company will also be represented in Victoria by its chief negotiator, Don Fergusson.

Meanwhile it was reported that Pacific Press had asked the provincial Labor Relations Board to adjourn indefinitely its complaint against mechanical unions employed by The Sun and Province. The company had complained that slowdowns were a violation of the B.C. Labor Relations Act.

The unions are among five involved in the dispute which has halted production of the city's two daily newspapers since Feb. 15.

wherever they may be. The unified command is making an urgent fundamental study of the whole question of attacking aircraft."

In Geneva, Swiss Transport Minister Roger Bonvin officially charged for the first time that Swissair crash was caused by sabotage.

"The tragedy . . . was the work of a criminal," he said in a television interview.

He noted that the explosion in the Swissair and Austraian planes occurred at about the same height. He said the same kind of detonator may have been used, possibly using barometric pressure changes to set off explosives.

The top representative of world airline pilots said Tuesday in New York his group has not ruled out the responsibility of a boycott to protest alleged Arab sabotage of civil aircraft carrying Israelis.

Capt. Ola Forsberg of Finland, president of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations (IFALPA), spoke with reporters after a call on United Nations under secretary general Ralph Bunche.

He expressed disappointment at the lack of international action so far over the crash Saturday of a Swiss airliner bound for Israel.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Some years ago, doctor-researchers set out to learn when it was that children suffered most from attacks of asthma. In the course of the studies, which included comparison of wind conditions as well as temperatures and other weather phenomena, the researchers found that the seasons made a difference.

Children were found to suffer more from severe attacks of asthma in the winter months. The doctors said they thought the reason could be due to the abundance of contaminants in the winter air. While the condition bothered children a great deal, adults were not bothered so much.

Younger asthmatics sought more medical help in late September and October, when mold spores and ragweed pollen were more prevalent. The children had fewer attacks than the adults in summer when the tree pollens were generally absent from the atmosphere.

Tender, loving care during short bus trip

Childrens' Airlift Completed Swiftly

A 10-ton helicopter transferring handicapped children from the mainland to the new Eric Martin Institute brushed a small van as it was landing near Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday.

No one was injured in the mishap, the only flaw in a swift and smooth shift of 25 young patients from the Woodlands School at New Westminster.

The accident happened shortly after 3 p.m. as the huge Labrador helicopter, from CFB Comox, settled for a landing on the second of two flights.

An undercarriage wheel struck the corner of the mini-bus operated by the B.C. Society for Crippled Children and waiting to assist in the transfer. The blow smashed the windshield but driver Frank Elston was unhurt.

Police estimated damage to the van at $400 and to the helicopter's undercarriage at $250.

Nurses accompanied the chronically-handicapped children on the two airlifts. The patients joined seven local cases on the fifth floor of the $7 million institute. Ultimately there will be about 60 such cases, to be eventually transferred to the Glendale treatment centre now under construction in Saanich.

The transfer had been delayed at least two weeks while the helicopter participated in a search for a small aircraft which crashed in the interior.

Balance of Error

U.S. DEFENCE SECRETARY Laird's call yesterday for a multi-billion-dollar extension of anti-ballistic missile sites was heralded by President Nixon's announcement last Wednesday that this was needed because of "a serious threat to our retaliatory capability" arising from recent Soviet nuclear developments. The Soviet defence minister expressed sentiments almost identical with Mr. Nixon's three days later.

Mr. Laird seeks to parlay last year's tie vote on an experimental two-site ABM system into a program that would provide two-thirds of the originally proposed $12,-billion system of defence for the country's inter-continental ballistic missile sites. That the move comes as the United States prepares to go to Vienna to continue talks on nuclear arms limitations is in keeping with the weird illogical logic that governs the nuclear balance of power.

Mr. Nixon has hinted at, and commentators have enlarged on, reports that Russia is determinedly increasing its already formidable arsenal of ICBMs — and many of these are said to be SS-9s, which carry a 20-megaton warhead, compared with the 1-megaton armament of the American Minuteman. The lethal effectiveness of the SS-9 is vastly increased by giving it a multiple warhead whose components can be guided to separate targets.

United States ICBMs are also being given the MIRV, or multiple-head, treatment, although by the end of this year the United States will only have 1,054 land-based ICBMs compared with Russia's 1,290. Both countries, of course, have powerful nuclear missile armaments on submarines.

In the mad mathematics of the balance of terror an ABM system is rated relatively low in importance, so long as it does not seriously imperil a nation's ability to inflict crippling damage on the population and industry of the ABM's owner. Both the United States and Russia have sufficient ICBM strength at present to assure such damage — and thereon balances, at least in theory, the peace of the world.

There are complications in the equation: there is the damage-limiting factor involving measures taken to reduce the effects of a nuclear attack; there is the first strike capability of a country which describes its ability to destroy the emplaced attack weapons and hence the retaliatory power of an enemy before delivering the conclusive second strike on population targets.

Measures which significantly alter these components and their relationship one to another in one nuclear country are cause for alarm in the other. Thus it is argued that a vast system of underground, nuclear-safe shelters which would seriously limit one country's ability to destroy the population of another, could carry more weight in the equation than would ABM sites which would only protect, with doubtful efficiency, the other nation's counterforce capability, or retaliatory power.

The multi-billion-dollar ABM system which is now being urged on the United States therefore will not necessarily move the Soviet Union to do more than it is now doing in the ceaseless balancing of power, according to some expert opinion. The whole land-based ICBM system could, in fact, be made obsolete if the advice of some experts were taken. They would have all ICBMs placed in nuclear submarines, which would render them almost completely safe from any threat of destruction by missiles. The balance of terror would therefore be stabilized by two opposing nuclear systems, each capable of destroying the other country and each practically indestructible.

A measure of the world situation today is that this can be made to look like a good idea — a reasonably effective means of preserving global peace through equal and opposite deterrents. But it is also a lunatic, Damoclesian situation which reflects no credit on homo sapiens or his unreasonable facsimile which substitutes today.

A Revival of the Domino Theory

THE NORTH VIETNAMESE OFfensive in Laos that resulted in Royal Laotian forces being swept from the strategic Plain of Jars poses a serious setback to hopes of an early peace in South East Asia. In order to bring men and materials into South Vietnam the Communists must have control of the Plain of Jars. Northern Laos is also a good jumping-off place for waging guerrilla warfare in neighboring Thailand and Cambodia. The fact that North Vietnam was willing to send two elite divisions into Laos indicates that the Communists are still intent on conquering South Vietnam in spite of their posturing at the Paris Peace Talks.

Of even greater significance is the fact that North Vietnam did not make a military move until the United States publicly stated that it would not vote funds for United States troops if they were sent to Laos. Nor was the Senate happy about the clandestine air support for Royal Laotian forces that is being provided by the United States. This apparently has been interpreted by the Communists as an "open-house" invitation. President Nixon would hesitate to commit United States ground forces to another Asian war when the Gallup Poll reports that 65 per cent of the United States population is against the war in Vietnam.

With North Vietnamese regulars and Pathet-Lao guerrillas entrenched in Northern Laos, Prince Souvanna Phouma's government in Vientiane has limited choices. The Kingdom of Laos has largely operated on U.S. subsidies since 1962 and despite U.S. air support and the presence of the Central Intelligence Agency, the Royal Laotian army is no match for a protracted Communist offensive.

There is little evidence, however, that North Vietnam will press the battle for Laos. The Communists have secured their supply lines and can now afford to sit tight and shift their attention back to the primary target of South Vietnam. But an easy string of Laotian victories might be tempting to the North Vietnamese, especially in view of their poor showing in South Vietnam over the last few months. It is inevitable that the Communist victory in Laos will revive the old "domino theory" of John Foster Dulles, that if one Southeast Asian country fell to the Communists, the rest would follow. While this logic is dubious, the North Vietnamese aggression is a step towards it—and a big boost for the hawks in Washington.

What Did You Pollute Today?

A USEFUL PURPOSE HAS been served by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell in his reminder to the public that everyone has a personal responsibility in the fight against pollution. The minister applied his remarks to the housewife who is now forming a decision on the cleaning substances she will use to avoid water contamination, and to the parks and outdoor enthusiasts who must exercise restraint in their disposal of non-returnable bottles.

What housewives do about detergents and what others do about non-returnable bottles will not, of course, solve the over-all problem of environmental contamination. But it will be an important element in determining how Canadians react to the issue. Pollution, as the minister implied, is not an evil to be blamed solely on somebody else. It is a matter for action by everyone—and habits of correction could start at an early age with children learning where to put their gum and candy wrappers.

FROM MONTREAL — By RICHARD PURSER

Feeding Quebecers the Raw Meat of Hate

HATE! Hate! Hate! To sit in the darkness surrounded by the word and by the feeling, knowing that you are the object of hatred around you—that is what it was recently to be an English Canadian attending the theatre of the Comedie Canadienne here. The play was Medium Saignant, which translates literally as medium bloody, or more usefully as medium rare, as one might order a steak. It was written by Francoise Loranger, a French Canadian nationalistic rabble-rouser who believes in involving her audiences in the on-stage action.

Purser

Involved the audience certainly was. As the "play"—if it can really be called that—progresses, it becomes clear that it is less a piece of writing than an incentive to audience participation in a (hopefully) cathartic exercise in hate. The audience is almost all French—an English speaker has to be either stupid or a reporter to venture near the place—and is largely young, with students of the nationalist-ridden University of Montreal and their girl-boy friends heavily in evidence.

St. Leonard Model

The play's action deals with a public meeting of the town council of a Montreal suburb suspiciously resembling St. Leonard, where there was, to put it mildly, a furore last year after the local Catholic school board decided to deprive the town's large community of Italian immigrants of the right to have their children educated in English rather than in French.

The question has been legally settled by Bill 63, which was passed after an envenomed parliamentary debate and a number of street riots, and will guarantee the right after July 1 of all Quebec parents to have their children educated in French or English, as they choose.

But the emotional scars of the controversy remain, and Medium Saignant does nothing to help heal them. Far from it. When the audience—which is of course also the audience of the play's hypothetical public town council meeting—joins in hollering "I hate the English," there isn't much an English-speaking viewer can do but scrunch down in his seat and try to look as French as possible. He can't even join in the shouting for fear of betraying his accent.

In the play, the council is debating bilingualism versus French unilingualism. The council members are French except for one suffering Italian and one insufferable WASP, who embodies all French Canadian cliches about English Canadians, who speaks only English, and who is in fact played by the only English-speaking member of the cast.

Unilingual Block

Because he speaks no French, other council members are forced to address him in English—a situation by no means uncommon in Quebec. Antonio Flamand, who quit the government to vote against Bill 63, said during the parliamentary debate that one of the school boards in his overwhelmingly French-speaking district was in the ludicrous position of having to conduct its business in English because, although its French members were bilingual, its sole English member was not.

So Medium Saignant has a basis in reality. Very much so. Early in the evening, before the event escalates into a display of hate, members of the audience are whispering to each other the French equivalents of "that's telling it like it is!"

But in due course the bigotries being poured forth on stage sweep up the audience. The French Canadian businessman on the council who has made his peace with the English is jeered as a "vendu" (sellout), the Italian is attacked with racist epithets involving such niceties as his spaghetti-eating propensities, and when the English member says he is just as much a Quebecer as anyone else, the cry "s—on the English" resounds (in English) from somewhere. It seems that the audience is at times on the point of running at the stage.

It was said above that "hopefully" the play was a cathartic experience for the audience. But it is hard to say whether the young people present were getting out of their systems the subliminal feelings about the English that any French Canadian is bound to have, or were treating the play as a call to arms.

Medium Saignant is frightening, but realistic in that it gets to the roots of Quebecers' worst feelings about each other. As the newspaper Quebec-Presse said, the play "marks the advent of a new form in Quebec theatre, a theatre that liberates because it informs." The cast is a collection of stereotypes, but it may be well that Madame Loranger has chosen to rub our noses in them.

Medium Saignant's viewers are bound to ask themselves, when they get home, how they came to be so emotionally involved. Madame Loranger's stated intention is to ask her clientele not so much to hate the English as to look at themselves.

FROM PARIS — By C. L. SULZBERGER

Worker 'Participation'

IT is arguable that President Georges Pompidou has a more "American" view of the development of capitalist society and of employer-worker relationships than his predecessor. On his first official trip to the United States it is interesting to elaborate this point.

General de Gaulle, who founded the fifth republic and the political movement which Pompidou today heads, had hoped to crown his own administration by a social reform program known under the label of "participation." This program was broadly indentical with the General's idea on such reform at the very start of his postwar political career and which he then termed "association." He himself conceded to me in later years that "participation" and "association" meant the same thing.

Pragmatist

But de Gaulle never precisely spelled out details of those changes in labor-capital relationships which he thought necessary, leaving it to others in his movement to philosophize — and, incidentally, to disagree among themselves. Pompidou, who had some years of experience as banker and industrialist, has a pragmatic approach to this problem, so crucial to French development. His approach, as he himself implies, is similar to that evolved in the United States.

Last week I had a long conversation with Pompidou on internal affairs. The President spent some time on this subject and said:

"One attributes a great many meanings to the word 'participation.' For my part, I feel that workers, at all levels, should be able to participate in the profits of an industry since they are largely at the root of these profits. Furthermore, I believe it desirable that they should be shareholders in their industry, thus enabling them to view it from both sides, that of employee and also that of small shareholder.

"Finally, I feel that the actual organization of French industry — or, at least, of most French industry — does not correspond to what is socially desirable and technically useful — the initiative and participation of medium level supervisors and the technical skill of workers, as concerns organization of work and operations of the company.

U.S. Decentralization

"All this is much more common in the United States than in Europe, especially in France. In the United States, direction is much more decentralized and each individual has more freedom in evaluating his own work than is the case in France.

"The above are various aspects of what is known as 'participation.' I intend to encourage them, one after the other. My fundamental idea is that the state must not demand this; it must simply favor and incite.

"The evolution itself must take place by means of accords between representatives of management and labor. This is a question of contracts. I am for a policy of contracts."

From past conversations I have had with Pompidou and which I am not entitled to quote here, it is apparent the President feels that it isn't easy to encourage the average French worker to put his savings into stock shares of his particular enterprise or to accept bonuses in such shares.

French workers prefer immediate raises or cash bonuses and it is hard to accustom them to the idea of shares, an idea common in the United States. Likewise he seems to think French stock exchanges haven't sufficiently developed their own role.

Monsieur Pompidou will therefore be more interested than most official visitors in learning about American economic and social practices as related to relations between capital and labor. He is plainly concerned with stimulating modernization of France's structure, but on a pragmatic basis.

Guidance, Not Force

He shares President Nixon's essential philosophy that the state can guide and stimulate such programs but that it is not the function of the state to impose its will, even if it considers its objectives essential to the nation's own well being.

In a sense Monsieur Pompidou may be compared to American Federalists and opponents of excessive use of central governing powers. If one makes allowance for the glaring differences in the extent and degree of problems common to France and the United States, he is a man whose outlook on political method bears some comparison to that of his host.

Tenants Are People

I was a participant of the delegation of tenants to Victoria on Tuesday, Feb. 17. One important problem I would like to discuss—tenants with children—was brought up during an interview with the Social Credit MLAs. They stated that children are boisterous, noisy, destructive, and that other tenants would complain. These are the antiquated attitudes of the gentlemen of the Social Credit government—the planners of tomorrow.

Well, things are not always what they appear to be. Investigation shows that the kinds of accommodation available for tenants with children, the citizens of tomorrow, are cheaply constructed frame buildings with no sound-proofing of any sort. If these buildings are left alone for a few years they will fall apart on their own through natural processes of stress and strain.

We are living in the Twentieth Century where technology has perfected and developed steel and plastic that can withstand terrific stress and strain. We are the builders of tomrorow. Are we building and planning for tomorrow? No! We are nothing more than instant slum builders and pollution creators, in our greed not giving a thought that we might perish in the process.

Tenants are people—with and without children! If we really were the builders and planners of tomorrow there would be a law prohibiting the housing of great numbers of people in cheap frame buildings which are potential firetraps. "Adults only" would be outlawed, and children allowed into our modern, spacious skyscrapers. Provision would be made for children's playgrounds, etc.—Concerned Tenant.

Inconsistencies

Yes, now they see the future of women who have the benefit of a theraputic abortion. They see the future of her physical and mental state. The Times of recent date brings forth a strong appeal for foster homes for deserted children. It rings a bell. Somehow all the talk from those seers and religionists who protest abortion — but who send their young sons, or who subscribe to their parishioners killing people via the armed forces — appears to be still more inconsistent than we thought in the first place.

We find it impossible to live comfortably in the same world with those who, either behind the cloak of religion or of medical omnipotence, shall assume the authority that both are attempting to put forth at the present time.

And so, they would bring forth more unwanted children by not letting the parents who bring them here, decide on an early abortion. She knows — not only how she feels about it — but she also knows her husband. Possibly he is not all he should be.

There are too many instances where religions condemn people to death right in our midst. One group refuses to let a child be saved from death by a blood transfusion. Another refuses to save a mother if the infant is in danger and lets her die. All sorts of things are going on — from religious views to war — and all of them kill. How do we come to engage in thousands of words on TV and more in print about a matter wherein, at less than three months' pregnancy, science finds no real sign of life? The answer to this would be interesting indeed. — A.B.W., Sidney, B.C.

Economic Interpretation

It seems that only the grossly anaesthetized could fail to perceive the commercial causes of the recently-ended Nigerian civil war.

Outside oil companies with their billion dollars of investments in Nigeria had to pick a winner to protect their stake and they finally chose the feds. Oil hungry France picked Ojukwu and later lost entry to that vast, black pool. The profit hungry bosses of the Kremlin have long wanted a commercial toe-hold in Africa. Along with the British entrepeneurs they also came out on top by supplying arms to the Gowon regime.

The violent differences over which "native" businessmen were to get the local spoils did not make things that bad for the oil shareholders. Production later seemed to expand at about the same ratio as the increase in deaths among Ibo children.

Another news heading clarifies the picture further—"Nigeria, Once The War Is Over, Ready to Slice Juicy Money Pie." Modern society is organized to serve one purpose. It cannot ride two horses in opposite directions. — J. G. Jenkins, 959 Darwin Ave.

U.S., RUSSIA KEEP RACE GOING

Outlook Gloomy at Arms Talks

By JOHN GELLNER

The 16th full session of the Conference on Disarmament opened the other day in Geneva. Eight years ago the meeting began amid high hopes that were, as some observers warned then and as we can now all see, exaggerated.

The world is no closer today to the objective of the conference than when it started.

Admittedly, it was a big objective: to find the means of putting into practice the disarmament principles laid down by the United States and the Soviet Union on Sept. 20, 1961, after long negotiations.

What the two countries had agreed on was nothing less than "general and complete disarmament," and establishment of "reliable methods of settling disputes and maintaining peace."

The Americans and the Russians also had agreed to maintain a balance of force while they advanced toward general and complete disarmament so neither side would gain a military advantage at any stage in the process of scaling-down, and ultimately dismantling defences. This was recognized as a very delicate matter.

'Strict Control'

Equally difficult was the problem of verification. Still, the agreement stated unequivocally that "all disarmament measures should be implemented from beginning to end under such strict and effective international control as would provide firm assurance that all parties are honoring their obligations."

Eighteen nations, five from the West (including Canada), five from the Soviet Bloc, and eight non-aligned, were chosen to deal with the practical aspects of balanced arms reductions and verification.

In fact, there were only 17. France refused to take part in what General Charles de Gaulle, then French president, considered a bitter farce.

To him, as to anyone else who took a sober look at the situation, the crux of the matter was whether or not the United States and the Soviet Union intended to disarm.

After all, when the Geneva Conference began sitting, these two nations were responsible for about 70 per cent of world military spending and held something like 98 per cent of all weapons of mass destruction.

Gen. de Gaulle differed from more trusting souls because he did not believe that the Americans and the Russians wanted to disarm, then or in the foreseeable future, whatever might be agreed upon in Geneva. So far, he has been proved right.

Since 1962, the United States and the Soviet Union have greatly increased their armaments. The tempo of the arms race between them has quickened — and it is this arms race which matters most to the world.

Carry-Over Issues

Last year, at the 15th session, the number of members of the Geneva Conference was increased by eight, including six non-aligned nations. This, incidentally, was the session's only positive achievement if it can be called that.

Not much more should be expected of the 16th session. Basically, it will deal with three issues carried over from last year.

The sea-bed treaty. This is a prime example of the two super-powers negotiating in bad faith, as Gen. de Gaulle foresaw. Above all both seem intent on not outlawing anything in the way of armaments which they might need.

This particular matter was brought up by the Soviet delegate, Alexei Roshchin, last March, when he submitted the draft of a treaty "on the prohibition of the use for military purposes of the sea bed and the ocean floor, and the subsoil thereof." The Russians wanted only fixed installations outlawed — yet the only dangerous weapon system which at present occasionally uses the sea bottom is the submarine, and because it can move under its own power, it was not to be banned.

Wanted Exception

Since the United States also has deep-diving nuclear submarines, it agreed with the Soviet Union that only fixed installations should be ruled out, but it wanted an exception made for defensive measures against submarines.

Several of the smaller countries intervened, Canada particularly forcefully. They demanded greater precision in the definition of what would be prohibited; geographical limitation of the ocean area in which fixed, undersea, anti-submarine defences would be permitted; and effective control and verification procedures.

There is a fair chance that a common U.S.-Soviet version of a sea-bed treaty will be hammered out at the current session, and more or less grudgingly accepted by the minor powers. It can be predicted with confidence that the treaty will forbid everything that does not matter, and leave untouched what does — the means of submarine warfare. This may sound cynical, but it is only a realistic appraisal of the probable outcome.

Geneva Protocol

Biological and chemical warfare. In August, 1968, at the 14th session of the conference, the British representative, Frederick Mulley, proposed the conclusion of a convention that would "supplement, but not supersede" the Geneva Protocol outlawing chemical and bacteriological weapons.

His idea was based on the fact that there is no agreement on what is a "war gas." Do temporarily disabling agents, like CS, come under the definition? Do defoliants come under the definition? Are they a weapon of chemical and not of biological warfare?

Narrower Field

Because of such lack of agreement, Mr. Mulley argued that it would be better to leave aside chemical warfare for the time being, and concentrate on biological or, more precisely, microbiological warfare.

In this narrower field an absolute ban, with no ifs and buts, would perhaps be possible against all agents "causing death or disease by infection in man, animals, or crops."

This perhaps could be agreed on at the current session — there is really not much reason why it shouldn't be. True, it would represent only slight progress from the 1925 Geneva Protocol, but disarmament and arms control move ahead, if they move at all, at a snail's pace.

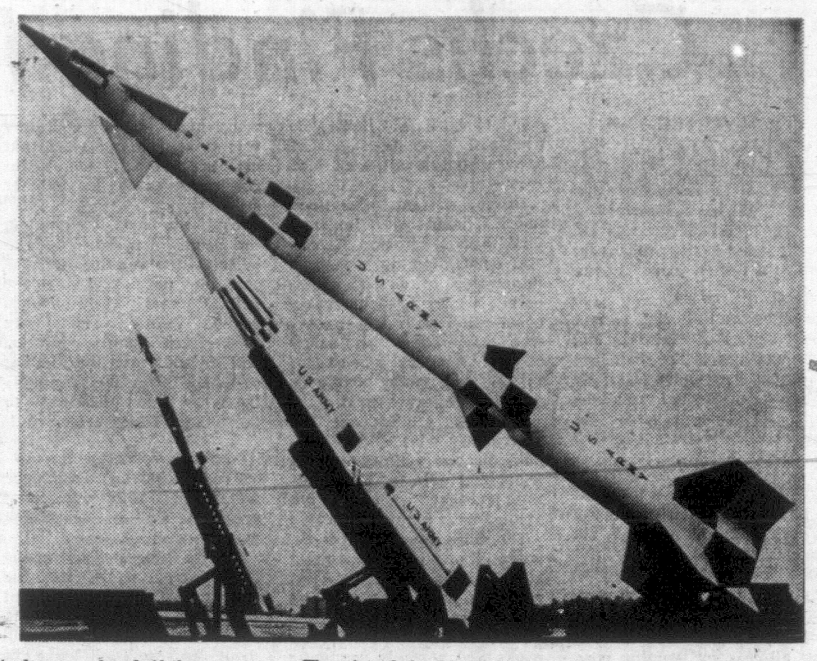
There even could be a significant improvement that is provided for in the British proposal. The signatories could perhaps waive the reservation embodied in the 1925 protocol that allows them to use otherwise outlawed weapons against non-signatories and against violators of the agreement.

This had the effect that everybody could keep biological weapons, in reserve. It made the ban dependent on self-restraint rather than on non-availability of the outlawed weapons.

Even if micro-biological means of warfare were forbidden, there still would remain the problem of getting all countries to accede to the convention. Many have not yet done so in respect to the Geneva Protocol of 1925. Similarly, a beginning will have to be made sometime in tackling the issue of chemical warfare weapons. There is hope that this may be taken up in earnest during the current session, but hardly any chance of an agreement being reached.

Compromise Plan

Comprehensive test ban treaty. A proposal is before the conference originally made last April at the 15th session by the Swedish delegate, Mrs. Alva Myrdal. It is a compromise proposal, designed to accommodate the Russians who oppose verification by on-site inspection.



The gist of the Myrdal plan is that all nuclear testing would be forbidden, including underground where it is now allowed, but infractions would be monitored from outside. The worst that could happen to a country that refused to allow the inspection of the site of a suspected blast would be that it would be brought before the United Nations Security Council.

Must Be Policed

Because the United States as a matter of principle opposes any arms control measure that cannot be policed, Mrs. Myrdal's proposal never had the slightest chance of being seriously considered.

To rescue it, Nigeria offered a compromise plan, according to which on-site inspections would be carried out by non-aligned countries that have the necessary technical know-how and have signed the Non-Proliferation Treaty. It can be taken as certain that the Russians will not accept even this.

As things stand, it matters little whether the disagreement over controls can be bridged. What does matter is that neither the United States nor the Soviet Union has any intention of stopping underground testing.

After all, they only agreed to ban atmospheric tests when they had conducted as many as they thought they wanted to conduct (395, between then, out of a world total of 423 up to the summer of 1963) and had perfected techniques and facilities for underground testing.

They have used underground testing since, progressively increasing the nuclear charges; in the next Amchitka test a three-megaton device will reportedly be exploded, the equivalent of three million tons of TNT.

Since new warheads are under development for the anti-ballistic missiles of both sides, tests will continue whatever any non-nuclear country may propose in Geneva.

In the meantime, as far as the United States and the Soviet Union are concerned, debate can continue on the problem of verification. This is another instance of the two countries negotiating in bad faith.

Go Over Old Ground

Apart from these three issues, two of which can be partially solved, some old ground will be gone over, almost certainly with the same exasperating absence of tangible results in every case.

Still, the game must be played, if for no other reason than to be there at the conference table if an opening for some slight advance toward disarmament or arms control should appear. It is fortunate that in Geneva the game is being played, with few exceptions, by seasoned diplomats, a species noted for patience.

Plea of Desperation From Brazil Newsman

By RICHARD BOURNE
Manchester Guardian

A copy of a speech, made before Christmas by a well-known Brazilian journalist when he was awarded his country's leading prize for journalism, has now reached the "Guardian."

It is a poignant plea for an end of press censorship and torture of political prisoners by the present military regime.

The speaker, Senhor Luiz Edouard de Andrade, was given the Esso national prize at a major function in Rio de Janeiro. (The company sponsors a major radio news program in Brazil.)

While his outspoken remarks were widely discussed in the country only a censored version was published.

"I came here, with professional humility, to receive the prize. But, in confidence, I can tell you sincerely that the prize a Brazilian reporter would aspire to in 1969 would be something rather elementary. It would be freedom of the press," he said.

"I spent six years of my life out of Brazil as a correspondent. During that period, obviously, I was informed of Brazilian events through European and North American newspapers. I never thought that some day, living in my own country, I would have to subscribe to overseas newspapers in order to know some things that are happening in Brazil, the place where I was born, where I work, and where I pay taxes.

"Two year ago, in this same ceremony, my colleague, Zuenir Ventura, said, 'Today the best Brazilian newspaper would be one composed not out of what is published, but one that listed all that cannot be permitted for publication.' I add now that of all the reports I have done this year the most important was not allowed for publication.

"In February, 1968, I spent a night in Da Nang, South Vietnam. Next morning I was going to the Khe Sanh base, surrounded at that time by the Vietcong. An old American war correspondent said to me, 'My friend, even if you live for a hundred years you will never forget the hell of Khe Sanh.' Today I say to you

MEDICI

— I've forgotten Khe Sanh. However, even if I live for a hundred years I will never forget the shouting I heard during the night of August 14 from a cubicle of a Brazilian prison.

"It is significant that among the 10 winners of the prize, two have been in prison in 1969, which they left with their innocence unchallenged. My friends, I dedicate this prize to all the innocent journalists who have been under arrest during this sorrowful year. St. Matthew the Evangelist, one of the best reporters I know, said: 'Blessed are those who suffer persecution for righteousness sake'."

Senor de Andrade, who is under 40, worked at one time for "Jornal do Brasil," the biggest Rio paper, as head of its efficient research department. He was given the Esso award for a series of articles in "Ultima Hora," traditionally one of the most Leftwing Brazilian papers, on the subject of psychoanalysis. He is now contributing to "Realidades," a newsmagazine.

The Brazilian press has been crossing swords with the military governments since the coup of 1964.

Some newspaper offices were occupied at the end of 1968, when the situation got much worse with the closing of Congress, and there has been veiled censorship since.

The emergence of urban guerrilla movements and the kidnapping of the U.S. Ambassador seem to have made the obsessively anti-Communist military more nervous.

While disturbing reports of tortures have been brought out of Brazil by foreign journalists, the fine corps of Brazilian journalists have had their hands tied.

On December 1 last year General Garrastazu Medici, the new president, publicly denounced tortures and 10 days later the Minister of Justice, Senor Alfredo Buzaid, promised to pursue any cases brought to his attention. However when "Veja," a magazine in Sao Paulo, and "Correio da Manha," a Rio daily, managed to cite individual cases they were warned by the Army to stop.

From this it would appear that the government is either unwilling or unable to put an end to some barbarous tortures by the military police which are known to have occurred.

Sprouting Time for the Legends

By ART STOTT

In an address Monday evening, Dr. William Rodney, historian and author, trimmed some of the frills from the legend of Kootenai Brown, explaining that the colorful character who campaigned successfully to have the Waterton Lake area declared a park made of his life an adequate legend without the introduction of fiction.

Stott

The anecdote defining the plainsman, or mountain man, as the son of a Scottish gillie serving Queen Victoria was one of the excrescences pruned off. Kootenai Brown, explained Dr. Rodney, was born when the Scottish gillie was 13 years old, and born in County Clare, Ireland, not Scotland.

But the authentic story, as he had been able to research it, made Kootenai Brown a figure of towering importance in the wilderness pioneering of British Columbia from late in the last century to early in this. Dr. Rodney proved his point for me.

In his vote of thanks to the speaker, Dr. Bob Lawrence raised an increasingly voiced criticism of Canadian legend-making. There isn't enough of it and Canadians have been inundated by the legends of other nations to the point where their own subjects are drowned out or ignored. It's time, he said, that we did something about it, and people like Dr. Rodney were doing something.

This is a point of view with which Provincial Archivist Willard Ireland agrees—with a difference. We've been slow in exploiting our own legendary resources in Western Canada—and in other part of the country—but perhaps Canadian legends, which are now emerging, have benefitted. Our people seem to have concerned themselves first with getting the facts, only later with embroidering them. The embroidery, as I understand Willard's position, must not do violence to the facts, but certain license is permissible in the realm of exaggeration.

We haven't many legends and most of what we have are more folk tales than epics of heroic stature. Nobody's written the Canadian Aeneid yet. We haven't any King Alfred burning the cakes, Canute telling the sea to back up, or Bruce learning perseverence from the spider. We're short on Robin Hoods. In fact, except for Indian word-of-mouth stories, our supply is low. We have the folk tale of Laura Secord and the cow—given a Victoria touch by the association of the late Judge Peter Secord Lampman, who was more interested in baseball than Canadian dairy product diversions.

There are also the legendary accounts of Sir John A. Macdonald's spirituous intake—and I'm told that as the years roll by William Lyon Mackenzie King's spiritual interests will assume legendary character.

It takes time, one of my friends explains. You can't make instant legends—or at least Canadians don't—because some of the elements of legend, including the propensity for exaggeration, find no Canadian evolution until their ability to sting or injure the subject is weakened by age.

We have our sports legends, but these are highly perishable. There are youngsters watching major league hockey today, for instance, who are only vaguely aware of the heroic feats of Maurice Richard, if they know them at all.

Still, the process is under way. The legends are forming. The raw materials are available. Pierre Esprit Radisson and Chouart Groselliers are beginning to get the treatment. Louis Riel is being elevated and others are catching the eye of writers and historians for dramatic presentation.

In time we may look forward to adequate handling of perhaps the greatest wilderness man of the North American west, David Thompson, the Nor'wester, of whom much has been written without giving him the warmth of flesh and blood and breath.

Like others, I have asked people whom I think should know, why we've been so slow. Two reasonably convincing replies have been forthcoming. Canadians, I'm reminded, have been a little reticent on the subject of folk heroes—and Canadian writers of only relatively recent times have devoted themselves to Canadian themes.

One thing is certain. The color is there. We've been washing it out in the sluices of factual scholars. Now we're starting the artistry of casting the gold into decorative form. In legend-making, it will lose nothing if we avoid the alloys of falsehood and concentrate on working the pure metal into fine design.

Czechs Finding It Hard to Forget 'Liberal Days'

By ALVIN SHUSTER

PRAGUE (NYT) — The Communist party celebrates the 22nd anniversary this month of its take-over of Czechoslovakia, trying to rekindle some of the proletarian fire in a disheartened people.

The papers and the speeches are full of talk about the beauties of Marxism and Leninism, as if the doctrines had just been announced by Moscow. Fraternal relations with the Russians are preached daily from above.

Workers are being told that a totally centralized economy is really best. And an old revolutionary song, "Left Foot Forward," has been revived to precede the evening radio news.

The people have been hearing all this for months now, ever since Dr. Gustav Husak, the 56-year old, enigmatic Slovak took over as party leader from Alexander Dubcek last April. But those who are still listening say they hear a slightly different tone these days.

Husak, a man of proved political skill who has survived prison, reform, invasion and occupation, is givng the impression of a leader sincerely trying to achieve reconciliation with the masses who remember the happy days of Democratic Socialism in 1968 and seem unable or unwilling to forget them.

He ties attacks on the reformists with pledges to hold the line against political trials and arrests, and takes the view that "whoever is not against us is a potential ally."

The allies among the people, pptential or otherwise, remain all too few for the party, which is proceeding with its own internal purge. Liberals have been ousted from the top ranks and work is beginning on the rank and file.

Extremists, once eclipsed, have emerged all through the apparatus. And Dr. Husak, who runs an authoritatian regime as it is, faces constant pressure from the ultra-conservatives to get tougher still.

While the party is changing, the people are not. The gap between the masses and the party has not narrowed in the last 10 months of the Husak regime. Many Czechs say they have tuned out on politics and leave the reading of party pronouncements — the press is full of them — to the party functionaries.

"We're like an audience watching a play with total apathy," said one Czech woman recently.

"We're interested not in the performance itself, but the ending. We're keeping quiet because we have no reason to applaud and no permission to shout. And we can't leave the room. We will keep watching because there is nothing else for us to do."

"We had a love affair with a young man called freedom," said another. "Now we're being asked to go back to our old husbands, and we're just not interested."

Despite Husak's efforts to win what he calls the long "struggle for the consciousness of the people," most people remain unhappy over what has happened and suspicious of what may come.

Emergency laws to discourage and punish open defiance went into the penal code last month. New curbs on travel to the West were recently disclosed.

The general anxiety caused by such measures was not abated, when, in the same week Husak spoke against frightening people, Jiri Lederer, a leading progressive writer, was arrested on undisclosed charges, along with others, the Ministry of the Interior, now headed by Radko Kaska, the 42 year-old former secretary to Husak, is talking of "Trotskyite plots" and "hostile acts" financed by Capitalist countries.

Moreover, many of the 1.5 million members of the party are in a state of uncertainty because of the interviews about to begin to weed out unrepentant liberals from the rank and file.

Although Husak talks of expelling the "misleaders" rather than the "misled," the opportunity is there for the wholesale ouster of anyone even slightly tainted by 1968.

NUCLEAR PLANT 'A BOMBSHELL'

Mayors Will Rejoice When It's Official

By ED GOULD

NORTH COWICHAN — The mayors of North Cowichan and Duncan today were happy with the prospect of a nuclear power station being built somewhere in the area but were containing their glee until something is put in writing.

Mayor Gerry Smith of North Cowichan said he had had no written or verbal applications or inquiries about the location of the $150 million power plant.

"But if we get it I think it would be a wonderful thing for the whole area."

Mayor Jim Quaife of Duncan was even more ecstatic.

"It's the answer to all our prayers."

He was floored by the unexpectedness of the announcement.

"I don't know what to say. It just comes like a bombshell."

The announcement was made by Premier Bennett in the legislature Tuesday night.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, B.C. Hydro chairman, said recommendations would be sought from SPEC — The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control.

"We don't want to pollute the country."

Kurt Horn, president of Cowichan-Malahat SPEC, said he is encouraged that the government is taking into considerations the advice and opinions of anti-pollutionists.

He said it was a little early to get panicky or make pronouncements. It was not known exactly where the plant might be located or what type of plant it might be.

"Our prime concern is the problem of thermal pollution."

Dr. Shrum said heat created by the nuclear reactor could be used to heat greenhouses or warm up chilly coastal waters to help the propagation of fish."

"I'm a little leery of that statement about fish being helped by warming up the water," Horn said. "It has already been determined that even a four degree rise in temperature can ruin ecology in a river. This has already happened where nuclear reactors have been built on rivers.

"Whether it would affect salt water the same way I don't know. It all depends on how they intend to use the water to cool the reactor."

Horn also was concerned about the release of radioactivity which Shrum said "is about the same as you'd get from a partner sleeping in the same bed."

Shrum said a person could safely lean up against the side of the reactor for a lifetime without suffering harm and also there was no danger of air pollution.

"I am far from being an expert," Horn said, "but I know that a plant at Oswego, N.Y., releases 130 curies (130 grams of radium) of radio activity a day. Before the plant was built the average daily amount of radio activity was 10 curies."

He said it had been proved that the effect of longtime exposure to that amount of radiation caused genetic defects and shortened life — "to say nothinng of destruction of ecology."

Quaife said some arguments used by objectors in other regions in Canada and United States which had been chosen as sites for nuclear reactors had lost their impact.

He was referring to comments that such sites become prime targets in case of nuclear war.

"To block progress with such arguments is simply a disregard of common sense."

Quaife said he wished to correct any impression that he was anti-industry because of his steadfast objections to any pulp mills being built in the Cowichan Valley.

A pulp mill would disturb the character of what is primarily a tourist area, but I don't see how a nuclear plant would."

Mayor Smith said he hoped the plant becomes a reality but was worried that the municipality might not be ready for a population explosion caused when a large work force established itself here for six years.

"We may not have the housing and we certainly don't have the school classrooms."

He said the same shortage occurred when Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited was built and many workmen had to live in trailers.

"We didn't even have a bylaw to allow trailer sites ready. We will welcome the plant, especially if we are prepared for the extra people!"

MAYOR SMITH

CAR RALLY SLATED GOOD FRIDAY

DUNCAN — A Jaycees-sponsored motor fun rally is scheduled for Good Friday, March 27, publicity chairman Bob Swanson said today.

Swanson said the rally, starting at the Canada Safeway parking lot downtown will follow a course through the Cowichan Valley and end at the parking lot. It will take about three hours.

Swanson said the rally is open to anyone on Vancouver Island or the mainland and information is available by writing to the rally chairman, Brian Haynes, Box 215, Duncan.

STRACHAN TELLS HOUSE:

End to Freight Aid Threatens To Wipe Out Milk Producers

A warning was issued from both sides of the legislature Tuesday that if freight assistance to the Vancouver Island dairy industry doesn't continue, milk producers might be forced out of business.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) pointed out that a federal task force had recommended an end to the $13 per ton freight assistance for feed.

The problem has reached "a crucial point" Strachan said, in that the $13 million dairy industry on the Island might not be able to continue. He asked Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford during discussion of the department estimates if farmers could expect any help in making presentations to the federal government.

Shelford said the department had made two submissions asking that the assistance be continued, and the matter is under study. He agreed with Strachan that discontinuance of the subsidy would be "very damaging" to the industry.

Frank Ney (SC—Nanaimo) said increasing amounts of cartoned milk being sold through chain stores posed a threat to the milk-producing industry on the Island.

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) said consumers are being "forced" to buy butter at about 12 cents more than they had to, and are discouraged from buying margarine because of a 12 per cent tax.

The government should have the tax removed, he added.

Tractor Prices Hurt Farmers

The former NDP leader said tractors can be imported from Britain for $2,000 less than those produced and sold in Canada.

Speaking during consideration of agriculture department estimates, Strachan asked Agriculture Minister Shelford to support farmers in banding together to "beat down monopoly control of farm machinery."

Shelford said Strachan "must have listened too closely to a speech I gave in New Westminster."

The minister said he isn't satisfied with the price farmers must pay for tractors.

William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) urged the government to pass legislation to ensure that parts for farm machinery be available for 10 years after purchase of the machines.

N. Cowichan Issues Organization Grants

NORTH COWICHAN — Grants totalling $7,325 were approved by North Cowichan council with reductions in some and refusals to a few organizations seeking funds for the first time.

Grants in lieu of taxes being levied are included. Recipients in this class include Crofton Community Centre, Cowichan Valley Boy Scouts, the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum, St. Peter's Church Crescent Homes building project, and the Navy League of Canada — Admiral Mainguy Hall in Maple Bay.

The Cowichan Exhibition will get $600, the same amount as last year. The John Howard Society, appearing on the list for the first time, will receive $100.

Additional sums totalling $2,000 will go to Duncan Juvenile Soccer Association, Somenos Community Centre and Vimy Community Hall under the parks and recreation budget.

Okinawa Return to Japan Poses Problem for U.S.

NAHA, Okinawa (AP) — Since the United States captured the western Pacific island of Okinawa during the Second World War, it has developed into what American military planners regard as a keystone of defence in the area.

The island's "central position in the arc of free world defensive strength from the Aleutians to Southeast Asia and beyond largely accounts for the U.S. military presence here," Robert A. Fearey, the U.S. civil administrator, said in a recent speech.

A look at the map shows what Fearey was talking about. Okinawa is situated 830 miles from the South Korean capital of Seoul, 400 miles from Taipei, Formosa; 510 miles from Shanghai, Communist China's main industrial city; and 860 miles from Hong Kong.

While Americans may regard it as ideally situated for military manoeuvres and influence in the area, many Okinawans don't relish the role.

With Okinawa and the rest of the Ryuku Islands due to be returned to Japanese rule by 1972, the question of what is to become of U.S. military installations is largely unsettled.

The agreement worked out between Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato and President Nixon calls for prior consultation, with Japanese authorities before any major moves involving U.S. bases in the islands. Major moves would include moving men or equipment in or out and any combat strikes launched from them.

Sources have said that American military men oppose anything that might hinder quick action in the event of any emergency.

The question of American nuclear arms on Okinawa is unsettled mainly because the U.S. won't comment on whether or not they are there. The Japanese and Okinawans both say nuclear weapons are based on the island, and both say they want them out when they resume governing in 1972.

Sato has said the U.S. has agreed to remove nuclear weapons. But American sources say that even after 1972, there is likely to be no official comment on whether American nuclear weapons are based there. The defensive punch now maintained by the United States on the island includes fighter-bombers, missiles, a division of combat-ready marines and the lethal eight-engine B52 bombers which fly on missions over Vietnam.

The question of the B52 missions to Vietnam is not settled either. The Japanese and Okinawans want the big bombers withdrawn. Many claim they are a safety hazard. Leftists see them as an undesirable link between Okinawa and the American position in the war.

The present American approach seems to be to wait and see if the missions still are regarded as necessary by 1972.

American bases occupy 26 per cent of Okinawa. The United States pays about $10.5 million each year in rent to small landowners on Okinawa and some of the smaller islands in the Ryuku chain.

A commonly cited figure for the initial American investment in the bases is $1 billion. Estimates for costs of building similar installations elsewhere—on Guam, 1,000 miles to the southeast, for example—range up to about $3 billion.

Fellowship to City Student

A University of Victoria student now completing a degree in honors English has won a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship.

Results were announced Tuesday in Princeton, New Jersey, by the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship Foundation.

List of designates will be sent to deans of all graduate schools along with a recommendation that the schools provide graduate fellowships for the winners.

The Victoria designate is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Roscow, 624 Island Highway.

He graduated from Qualicum Beach secondary in 1966.

Roscow plans to start graduate work in medieval studies in English at the University of Toronto next fall.

Boise Cascade

Net earnings of $84 million are up 37 per. cent from restated 1968 earnings of Boise Cascade Corp. for per share income of $2.85 compared with $2.11 a year earlier.

Dollar value of net sales was $1.72 billion, 13 per cent higher.

Net income in the final quarter amounted to $15.7 million, or 145 per cent higher than the $6.4 million reported in the three months of 1968.

Hollinger

Consolidated net profit of Hollinger Mines Ltd. declined from $12.3 million in 1968 to $9.87 million last year, or from $2.50 to $2.01 per share.

The dip was attributed to a 3½-month strike at Iron Ore Co. of Canada, from which Hollinger derives a major portion of income in ore rights and concessions.

Evans

Evans Products Co. reports a 25 per cent increase in net earnings for the period ended Dec. 31, for a record $14.7 million compared with $11.8 million the previous year.

Sales amounted to $527 million, up from $439 million, or a 20 per cent improvement.

Per share earnings were $2.56 ($2.19) assuming full share dilution and after reflecting a 4 per cent stock dividend.

Fawn Bay

A decision on whether to employ diamond drilling on its Woman Lake, Ont., property will be made by the end of the month by Fawn Bay Development Ltd., of Vancouver.

The company has 16 anomolies to choose from, and in this direction ground geological and geophysical surveys are being made.

Surface work also is being done on properties in the Cassiar area and in the Casino area, Y.T.

Citation

An extensive and detailed exploration program will be conducted on its Red Mountain copper property, near Trinity, Wash., reports Citation Silver Mines Ltd.

Indicated ore reserves at the former producer are 1.9 million tons, with the same quantity inferred, said the company's consulting geologist. The property is suitable for open pit, followed by block caving, he said.

Uranium Lure Sparks Staking of Claims

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — About 3,000 claims have been staked in the last two months in an area 200 miles east of this territorial capital—about 300 within the boundaries of a proposed national park.

George McConnell, president of Precambrian Mining Services Ltd., said uranium is the lure.

"It's almost impossible at this time to find someone in Yellowknife to work on staking crews," he said. "Everyone is tied up."

Mining activity in the area follows considerable debate between mining companies and officials of the national parks branch of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Ottawa initially proposed a 4,300-square-mile reserve park area, with a core having full park status and mineral exploration allowed in the contiguous area.

Sites in the reserve area that did not prove economically exploitable within a specified period would be linked to the core and given park status.

After several meetings between mining and government officials, Ottawa was said to be considering a compromise that would reduce the park's size and allow mining interests more freedom.

The government now appears to be considering two other sites instead. One of them would be in the Nahanni Valley near the N.W.T. — Yukon border and the other in an unnamed Arctic island.

Canadian Toy Firms Must Pool Efforts

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian toy manufacturers must merge or pool production resources if they are to compete with foreign toy-making giants after the lowering of tariffs, Mannie Grossman, president of Reliable Toy Co., said Monday.

Grossman was addressing toy manufacturers at the 30th annual Canadian Toy Fair at Place Bonaventure.

"Does the toymaker who produces toys licensed from a U.S. company think he's going to keep producing for the American company when the tariff wall has fallen?" Grossman asked.

More than 100 members of the Canadian Toy Manufacturers Association are showing off their latest creations during the six-day display which opened Sunday.

The high-volume production lines of the giant U.S. toy manufacturs, Grossman said, will treat Canadian consumers as an extension of the U.S. market at prices below what is economical for the much smaller Canadian firms.

His firm welcomed lower tarriffs because its development facilities gave it sufficient power to capture a sizeable portion of the U.S. market.

He said the proposed Canada Development Corp. could serve as a catalyst for mergers, and could be useful if its functions are properly defined.

Ottawa Backs All-Canada Route for Coal Shipments

OTTAWA (CP) — Government officials expressed support Tuesday for the principle that Canadian coal from the British Columbia interior should move on an all-Canadian route to Vancouver for shipment to Japan.

G. M. MacNabb, assistant deputy minister in charge of energy resources, said 16,000,000 tons of coal will have to be moved each year in the early 1970s to fill Japanese purchase contracts.

CP Rail has contracted with most of the mines in the vicinity of Fernie, to move the coal to Vancouver. MacNabb said the company will have to consider seriously how dependable a freight service it can provide for this volume.

Alex Brown, executive director of the Dominion Coal Board — which now is being dissolved and absorbed into the energy department — told a Commons committee CP Rail is confident it can do so, employing special coal trains.

Ran Harding (NDP — Kootenay West) noted there is a proposal to build a new line from southeastern B.C. to connect with the Great Northern Railway in Montana, and move Canadian coal to the American west coast and than back to Vancouver's new Roberts Bank port.

Harding said Canadian coal should move over an all-Canadian route, and MacNabb and Brown said their department agreed.

MacNabb said the problem is that Japanese steel mills do not have large storage areas in which to keep an inventory of coal. They depend on steady shipments from Canada, Australia, or other sources.

It will be important to Canada's performance of its delivery contracts that there be no disruption of coal movements from the Kootenay area to Vancouver, and into ships' holds.

Brown said CP Rail freight rates will be cut from nearly $6 to about $3.50 a ton when shipments reach their full volume. This rate is comparable with any coal freight rate obtainable in the U.S., he said.

Japan Still First In Shipbuilding

TOKYO — Japan maintained her position as the world's leading shipbuilding nation in 1969, launching 8.9 million gross tons or 47.2 per cent of the world's total, according to the Japan Shipbuilders' Association.

This is the 14th consecutive year that Japan has held the lead calculated on launched ships of 100 gross tons and larger.

In its monthly publication, "Japan Steel Notes", major steelmaker-shipbuilder Nippon Kokan reports there has been little change in the trend to large size vessels.

Number of ships launched by Japanese shipyards declined from 1,115 in 1968 to 1,068 in 1969 but the total gross tonnage increased 3.9 per cent from 8.58 million to 1.92 million tons.

Compared with the previous year, world shipbuilding increased 12 per cent, from 16.9 million to 18.9 million gross tons.

Main reason for this growth is the increasing number of large capacity vessels being built in Western Europe. Of particular importance is the 76 per cent gain recorded in France where launchings rose from 490,000 to 870,000 gross tons.

Shipbuilding rankings, based on gross tonnage launched in 1969, following Japan were West Germany 1.66 million, Sweden 1.26 million, Great Britain 1.06 million and France 870,000.

Industrial Production Shows Gain

OTTAWA (CP) The Dominion Bureau of Statistics' industrial production index rose 1.4 per cent in December to bring the gain for 1969 to five per cent, the bureau has reported.

Based on 1961 output equalling 100, the index rose to 171.5 in December from 169.2 in November.

The index measures the output of manufacturing, mining, milling and oil wells, and electric power, gas and water utilities. These constitute nearly a third of all Canadian production, and are most seriously affected by cyclical swings in the economy.

The bureau said the index for the fourth quarter of 1969 was 1.8 per cent above the third quarter. Most of the December increase was in mining, where a strike in nickel mining led to strong gains.

Monetary Union Drive Opened by CM Nations

PARIS (WP) — The six common market finance ministers Tuesday confidently reaffirmed their hopes of achieving by 1980 a genuinely European currency which would challenge the supremacy of the dollar.

Underlying the informal two-day meeting was the still far-off goal of creating a European dollar capable of dethroning the Eurodollar — U.S. currency held overseas that has become the galling symbol of European monetary dependence on Washington.

The creation of an independent western European money would be the last stage of a rocky road toward economic and monetary union among common market nations still intensely jealous of their sovereign rights in such key domains.

But common to four complicated unity plans — presented by the common market executive commission, Belgium, Germany and Luxembourg — was the realization that only joint sacrifice would achieve their single goal.

Such a mood was a far cry from former French president Charles de Gaulle's single-handed efforts to undermine both the pound and dollar often to the despair of his common market partners as well as his intended "Anglo-Saxon" victims.

Although the Paris meeting purposely sought no decisions, French finance minister Valery Giscard D'Estaing noted that only a year ago agreement on long term economic and monetary policy would have been impossible.

MORE CO-OPERATION

This was taken as an allusion to de Gaulle's retirement last April and the subsequent creation of special drawing rights, French devaluation and German revaluation. all of which have helped improve international — and especially European—monetary co-operation.

Spurred by the new spirit of co-operation born at the Hague summit conference last December, the ministers Tuesday decided to set up a special committee of seven experts.

When formally approved by the common market's executive commission, the committee will seek to harmonize the four plans on achieving economic and monetary union and report back by summer.

But despite the relative euphoria, the going in the future was expected to be much rougher than the six-nation agreement reached last month providing up to $2 billion of short term automatic monetary aid to any member in temporary difficulty.

Implicit in future progress is gradual but nonetheless real abandonment of national sovereignty.

Although Giscard spoke of the necessity for "parallel development" of economic and monetary policy, observers still feel the French head a school more interested in gaining the monetary benefits of monetary union than paying the economic price.

EFFORTS BLOCKED

Politically, monetary union is easier to swallow if only because it involves gradual limits on abolition of fluctuation among the values of various common market currencies but no obvious curtailment of independent national policy.

Just for that reason, the Germans and Dutch want agreement first on economic policy — concerning harmonization of tax policies, rates of inflation, economic growth, credit policy, gross national product targets — before monetary union.

Significantly, both Germans and Dutch blocked French efforts to even discuss plans to pool as a common market reserve fund the member countries' shares special drawing rights, the liquidity created last year at U.S. initiative.

The Germans voiced fears that premature monetary union would crumble in the case of major crisis, much the way the common market's controversial farm price policy was shaken last year by the successive changes in the French and German currency parities.

TAX TIPS FOR 1970

This column has been prepared by the department of revenue, taxation. Generally applicable answers to common questions are attempted. Where unusual circumstances render the answers inadequate to your needs consult your taxation guide. If you are still in need of help write to P. J. Kelly, public relations officer, National Revenue, Taxation, Victoria district office, for free advice.

Q. I am over 65 years of age and no longer contribute to the Canada Pension Plan. Do I still have to have a Social Insurance Number?

A. Yes. Originally it was required only by those taxpayers making contributions to the Canada Pension Plan but now it is required by all those who file an income tax return. Application forms for social insurance numbers are available from any post office, district taxation office, unemployment insurance office or office of the department of health and welfare.

Q. Do I have to acknowledge bank interest as income when filing my income tax return if they don't send me a T5 slip?

A. Yes, bank interest is income and it is your responsibility to report it whether or not you have received a T5 slip from the bank.

Q. For income tax purposes, are fees to fraternal societies and service clubs deductible? What about union dues? I understand that they are taken as a deduction but that there is only a portion of the dues allowable. How do I know how much I can claim for my union dues and how do I know what is not an allowable deduction?

A. Fees paid to fraternal societies and service clubs are not deductible from employment income. Your union should inform you what you can claim for your union dues by giving you a receipt to file with your imcome tax return.

Q. I am a salesman operating out of my house. I have a room set up as an office. Can I claim any expenses for this "office" when figuring my income tax?

A. If the room is used solely for the purpose of earning your income you may be entitled to deduct a portion of the cost of maintaining your house as a business expense. Unfortunately, more information would be required before you could be advised on how to calculate the amount of your deduction, but your district taxation office will be pleased to help you.

Q. I arrived in Canada in August last year and am told that when filing my income tax return I have to pro-rate my personal exemptions. What does this mean?

A. This is explained in Item 21 of the Guide to the 1969 T1 Short and Item 20 of the 1969 T1 General Tax Guide under the heading Special Rules for Immigrants and Emigrants. Basically, it means that you are allowed to claim exemptions for only that portion of the year you were a resident of Canada. If you were a resident for 200 days, you would be allowed your exemptions multiplied by 200/365.

Q. I am now receiving payments from the Canada Pension Plan. Is this income taxable? If so, do I put it on the tax form as part of my income, or does it have to be entered in a special place on the form?

A. Canada Pension Plan benefits are to be included in income on your income tax return by entering the amount you received from this source in the space marked "Old Age Security Pension and Supplement, and Canada or Quebec Pension Plan benefits."

Aswan Dam, Suez War Front Mirror Modern Egypt

By STEPHEN ROSENFELD

CAIRO (WP) — To search for the thrust of Egypt today, you must leave Cairo and its subtleties of mood and policy, and go instead to two other places each of a more direct significance: eastwards across the gravel pit and slag heap that is the desert to the front at the Suez Canal; and southwards, along the green-trimmed Nile to the country's showpiece development project, the high dam at Aswan.

Heading past Cairo's blocks and blocks of handsome suburban villas, our specially cleared press bus passes at once into a war zone; a MiG's nose poking from an underground revetment, manned foxholes, concrete bunker caps, trained anti-tank guns, tracks indicating hidden vehicles, orderlies in mufti making their officers tea by a fire.

Suez City, situated at the point where the canal meets the Gulf of Suez, is a disaster area: an indefensible city of 265,000 reduced by nearly three years of Israeli bombing and shelling in the Suez war to a bare 10,000 people. Whole blocks are vacant, silent, glass gone, ceilings open to the sky, walls crumbled or pockmarked. The Egyptian officials who have arranged the tour stop the bus at piquant scenes: a school smashed into rubble, a convent church in which the figure of Christ hangs from the cross by a single hand, the other hand and the feet amputated by a blast.

Civilian casualties amounted to 400 dead and 900 wounded ("most of them women and kids"), we are told. No signs of any Egyptian military activity are evident. Word is about that United Nations observers informed Israel that there would be visitors in Suez today; there is no attack, although there was shelling yesterday. We are hustled back aboard, and no one lags.

On the spur of the moment, the bus sets out for the metal rod factory at Abu Zabal, some 12 miles into the countryside from Cairo, where Isreli Phantoms had struck that same morning. That the Egyptian authorities should, for the first time, be alert to this potential of the foreign press startles and delights the old hands.

The factory turns out to be a ramshackle enterprise sitting amid cactus at least several hundred yards from the closest built-up areas, which appear to be only typical miserable peasant huts. Nothing of a military nature in or near the factory is either visible or acknowledged. The Israelis, according to the local press, described the target as an "army camp," later claiming a "navigational error."

A bloated dead horse lies stinking in front of several shattered workshops where, an eyewitness relates, jets swept in shortly after work began at 8 a.m., killing 50 men and wounding 69 more.

Some foreign reporters are escorted to the hospital where the victims lie. There women in black are mourning with a shrieking grief that unnerves those unaccustomed to it. The women fling gravel at the foreigners, and at Egyptian soldiers standing nearby as well. Whatever the degree of national concern for casualties — foreigners differ in their estimates of it — the personal reactions are overwhelming.

After such a day, it is a relief to fly to Aswan for the high dam, which is due to be finished in July. If you have seen one power and irrigation dam, you really have seen them all — although this one is unique in the number of guns, cannon and ballons defending it. The reason to go is not because there is fascination in a big pile of rock and cement, but because a visit gives the mind and imagination play.

Aswan requires both: the mind to take in the statistics and dimensions, each more impressive and duller than the last, and the imagination to conceive that the single greatest resource of the country ("Egypt is the Nile, the Nile is Egypt") is being properly exploited for the first time in 5000 years of history.

By a single stroke the dam will increase Egypt's cultivable acreage by a third and its power by a like order. It will back up water ("Lake Nasser") hundreds of miles, across a national border into the Sudan. It will thereby give thousands of timelessly brown, arid acres their first touch of water.

Politically, of course, the dam represents the successful culmination of Nasser's grand strategy of the 1950s to play off one superpower against the other. It represents too the most conspicuous delivery on his promise of progress for the people.

Economists may argue whether this modern pyramid offered the most efficient use of available resources. But a giant public works project has obvious appeal to a leader seeking to employ, collect and display the new power of a centralist government.

The Soviet sponsors of the high dam are little in evidence: a few bilingual greetings and exhortations but — with all but 180 of the original 3000 technicians gone home — practically no blond heads among the dark Egyptians. To be sure, the equipment and turbines are all Russian; ten Russians are to stay indefinitely to supervise the latter.

WHY

Inflation Mainly to Blame

Inflation is something everyone has learned about the hard way. The cost of food, housing, services, in fact almost everything in the family budget has risen to record levels. Dominion Bureau of Statistics records show that the cost of living has risen 20% since 1961.

One of the few exceptions in British Columbia during this period of rising prices has been the cost of electricity. According to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the consumer price index (1961 = 100) for domestic urban electric rates in July 1969, reached a level of 112.4 for Canada. For British Columbia, using the new rates, a comparable index would be 91 — the reverse of the national trend.

Inflation Has Caught Up with B.C. Hydro, too.

Like other major utilities throughout Canada and the United States, we are caught in an unprecedented inflationary squeeze.

Cost of Money

One of the big factors contributing to the need for a rate increase is the cost of money that must be borrowed to pay for new generating plants, transmission lines, substations and distribution facilities to serve new customers. The following table, taken from Bank of Canada Statistical Summary for the month of January 1970, shows the rapid rise in interest rates paid since 1965 on selected Provincial bond issues:

DATE	INTEREST RATES
December 1965	5.90%
December 1966	6.63
December 1967	7.29
December 1968	7.92
December 1969	9.19

Wages Up

Salary and wage rates (including fringe benefits) faced by B.C. Hydro have increased over 50% since 1962. As an example of this trend, the following table shows how a journeyman lineman's hourly rate has changed since April 1, 1967.

DATE	WAGE RATE	FRINGE BENEFITS
June 1, 1967	4.35	1.07
April 1, 1968	4.65	1.36
April 1, 1969	5.04	1.49
January 1, 1970	5.39*	1.59

Hourly rate increases, effective April 1, 1969, and January 1, 1970, for a B.C. Hydro journeyman lineman, amount to 15.9% over the nine-month period.

Other Hydro labour costs also have risen steadily.

Other Costs Up, too

Inflation has affected practically everything B.C. Hydro buys — wire, poles, trucks, office supplies and other equipment and services.

School taxes and grants paid by Hydro to cities and municipalities also have risen sharply — from $7.1 million in 1962 to $15 million in 1969.

Rates Favour Residential Customers

Rates are being increased for all classes of customers — residential, commercial and industrial. Rate structures have and will continue to favor residential customers but revenues now have fallen considerably below the costs of providing service to them. The volume and pattern of electrical use in households makes it relatively more expensive to serve residential customers than other classes of customers. Fixed and operating costs alone (including billing, records and meter reading) average about $4 a month for each residential account before any electricity is used. Bills to many residential customers do not even cover these costs.

How Our Rates Compare with Other Areas

Even with the announced increases, B.C. Hydro residential rates will be below the average across North America. There are as many areas with higher rates as with lower rates. Naturally, most critics select the latter. Such comparisons are meaningless unless all the factors affecting rates are considered — just as it would be meaningless to compare B.C. Hydro rates with those in areas where electricity costs more.

RATES IN ANY AREA REFLECT THE COSTS OF PROVIDING SERVICE.

Electricity Still Today's Best Bargain

The new rates will result in increased bills for all customers. Despite the increases, rates for most residential customers will still be below the rates charged in 1961 — not a bad record after several years of galloping inflation.

COMPARISON OF RESIDENTIAL RATES

Monthly Consumption (kilowatt hours)	Monthly Bill 1961 Rates	Monthly Bill New Rates	Monthly Reduction or Increase Compared with 1961
40 kwh	$ 2.00	$ 2.00	—
70	3.50	2.10	$1.40 Reduction
100	4.25	3.00	1.25 Reduction
200	6.75	6.00	0.75 Reduction
400	10.07	10.10	0.03 Increase
700	12.77	13.40	0.63 Increase
1000	16.19	16.70	0.51 Increase
2000	28.69	27.70	0.99 Reduction

New electric rates (effective March 1, 1970) will be applied on bills after April 30.

A Few Facts

1. No power is exported to the United States on a firm basis except very small amounts to the isolated communities of Point Roberts, Washington and Hyder, Alaska.
2. During the past five years, B.C. Hydro has imported from the United States far more power than it has exported.
3. Columbia River projects have been financed to date entirely out of funds received from the United States under the terms of the Columbia River Treaty. The Columbia projects have had no effect whatsoever on B.C. Hydro's operating costs.
4. Over 50% of the electrical energy used by Hydro customers today comes from the Peace River project.
5. Electric rates are increasing throughout North America. Utilities in Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and other provinces and electric companies in many American cities, including Portland, Chicago, San Francisco and New York, have announced or are planning rate increases.
6. Approximately 50,000 of B.C. Hydro's residential customers have been paying less for electricity than they would have on Toronto, Winnipeg or Seattle rates.
7. Since B.C. Hydro was formed in 1962, overall rate reductions have saved customers over $170 million.

There will be no increase in gas rates.

PEOPLE FEAR FOR FUTURE

Burma Is a 'Nervous' Country

By LEWIS M. SIMONS

RANGOON (AP) — Not many Burmese fear for their lives, but many fear for the way of life they became used to in Burma's first years of independence.

It is a nervous country. Conversation about the government is in hushed tones when friends meet.

No one appears to have any real knowledge of what Gen. Ne Win and his military regime are thinking, eight years after their seizure of power.

The press is nationalized and controlled by the army. Rumors have replaced news. When a government official is invited to a social function by a foreign embassy he must first get cabinet approval and afterward must report who was there, who spoke to him, what was asked, what he replied.

MUST PLACATE CHINA

Most of her neighbors in Southeast Asia are forming bonds of protection and economic co-operation with each other, but Burma is perhaps more alone than ever. Ne Win refuses to be drawn into alignment with his neighbors just as he refused to accept substantial foreign aid from the major capitalist or Communist powers.

The impetus for Ne Win's tightrope walk between the world's power blocs is the overwhelming presence of Communist China on Burma's northeast frontier.

In 1960, the two neighbors agreed on demarcation for their 1,200-mile border. The specific cost to Burma was minimal—the transfer of about 50 square miles of territory to China—and the result appeared to be an achievement for the small nation.

But implicit in the deal was Burma's concession to accept a degree of neutrality which allowed no associations with countries hostile to China. India, which occupies a border with Burma on the northwest, was the country Peking had foremost in mind when it reached agreement with former prime minister U Nu.

ECONOMY IN TROUBLE

Now the United States, the Soviet Union and the smaller nations of Southeast Asia, most inimical to China, are in the same category from Ne Win's viewpoint.

Chinese-Burmese relations moved smoothly until 1967 when ugly anti-Chinese race riots broke out in Rangoon. Peking withdrew its diplomatic and aid representation and openly recognized the Burma Communist party.

So the bespectacled general, aware that he and his nation of 27,000,000 could be roasted in one blast from the big power at his door, carefully juggles generous offers of help from the outside world and accepts far less than Burma needs.

While the dictatorial Revolutionary Council has improved some aspects of Burmese life, notably by broadening health services and education, no one—not even Ne Win himself—denies that the economy is in deep trouble.

All but total nationalization of industry and commerce has reduced export earnings by more than half. Rice production has ground to stagnation. The black market is rampant. Unemployment is soaring and with it the cost of living. The gross national product is the lowest in Southeast Asia.

For want of spare parts, cars and trucks stand idle all over Rangoon. The old riverboats, the side-wheelers that once inspired Kipling, lie wallowing in rust and disrepair instead of making the 440-mile run up the many-mouthed Irrawaddy to Mandalay.

The biggest hindrance to Burma's economy is distribution. Military officers have taken over the entire national infrastructure. Because most of them are ill-prepared for their jobs the distribution system does not work. Almost everyone in Burma, including senior army officers, lives on the black market.

The people who resent the Ne Win regime most are those of the former elite and middle class, the intellectuals, the one-time top civil servants and the managers and owners of businesses.

Sung Dynasty Piece Brings $108,400

LONDON (UPI) — It looks, one expert said today, like "a plain and rather boring piece of porcelain." It is the most expensive piece of porcelain in the world.

Sotheby's, the art auction house, sold it Tuesday for $108,400, nearly double the previous world record sale price for a piece of porcelain. The earlier reocrd was set in Sotheby's Tokyo sale last October.

The porcelain bowl sold Tuesday to Sparks, a London dealer, dates from the Sung Dynasty of China (A.D. 360 to 1279) and may have been made for the imperial palace.

Edie Adams Still Wonders About Coin's Other Side

NEW YORK (AP) — In her girlhood, Edie Adams couldn't decide between a career in music or a career in fashion design.

So, typically, she tossed a coin—and show business won. Now and then she wonders if her life wouldn't be simpler if the coin had made the other decision.

"Show business is really geared more for men than for women," she says.

"A working father is one thing—a working mother quite another. There's no one to keep home fires burning for women."

Edie, who portrays a breezy gal in cigar commercials on American television, is one of the busiest performers in the entertainment industry.

She spends about 35 weeks a year singing in the country's top supper clubs, and also is in steady demand for movies, television specials, and summer stock.

"I would like to do a Broadway show, but I can't afford to," she says. "You can earn about three times as much in summer stock as you can on Broadway. Isn't that ironic."

CBC Counters 'Rock' With Mature Format

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC is trying to answer pop-record radio shows with more than just louder music.

Action Set, a weekly two-hour program, offers around the-world comment on record sales, original humor, discussions and impartial dealings with such topics as sex and drugs — as well as the latest music.

Ron Gordon, one of the program's producers, says: "I think the trouble with most of the 'Top 40' stations is that they're not willing to spend any money. Then they don't use a lot of the big rock albums because the tracks are too long and it would mean less commercials."

Women's Group Bound Up In Book Sale

By ELIZABETH FORBES

If you enjoy reading then you most likely enjoy browsing along shelves to find your favorite authors. You like to take a book in your hands, open it and search through its pages. You get pleasure in making a slow choice and when that choice is made in carrying off your find for hours of leisurely satisfaction.

Forbes

If this description fits then you will be interested tin the fact that the Victoria Conservatory of Music women's committee is busy arranging its fifth annual book sale for March 5 and 6 in the spacious rooms at 613 Pandora Avenue, where the conservatory once was housed.

Right now committee members are busy unpacking, sorting and arranging donations of books sent in to them daily by interested friends.

These cover a wide range of subjects including the arts, cooking, gardening, music, poetry, interior decorating and the theatre.

There is once section of shelves devoted entirely to books on travel. Another to biographies. Still another to the occult.

One room already has a good selection of text books (some at university level). Nudging this section are shelves for the classics and still more shelves for Canadiana.

There are paperbacks by the score, from hair-raising "who-done-its" to the most thought-provoking writings of the past and present. Fiction, too. Shelf after shelf of fiction.

All books are in good condition. If they were new, each one would cost a pretty penny.

However, because this is a "used book sale", price tags are starting low. So low in fact, it will be easy to select a couple of dozen of your favorites without denting your pocketbook.

There's added interest for you in a selection of good magazines and also in a room where you'll find long-playing records.

Although the comittee already has a large selection sorted, priced and waiting on the shelves, it still needs more books and more LP records of all kinds. If you have any that are merely taking up space in your home, perhaps you'd like to donate them.

You can do this by telephoning 592-9709 or 384-1717 for a prompt pickup or delivering them yourself to the Pandora address from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. any weekday moring.

All this talk of books and reading reminds me of a saying I learned from my grandmother a long time ago.

She loved books. She loved to read. And I think instilled some of that love in a young granddaughter.

She had a collection of T.C. Haliburton's wise and witty sayings (the Maritime's well-known Sam Slick). And from that collection she could nearly always find a sentence to fit a situation.

I remember one she quoted often. Especially when she found me huddled in a corner of her kitchen my nose deep in the pages of a book.

She would look down at me, a smile wrinkling the corners of her gray-blue eyes. Her hands would be folded in her voluminous white apron. And she would say softly, "Some books are read in the parlor and some in the kitchen, but it test of a real genuine book is that it is read in both."

Lucky Break in Fall

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Mary Waskerwitz, a university of Michigan shophomore, spent her 19th birthday in the hospital Tuesday recovering from the injuries she received in a fall from a fifth-floor dormitory ledge.

She landed on the back of freshman Minda Tilchin, 18, who was lying on the courtyard grass reading a book.

Police said Miss Waskerwitz took a stroll on the 24-inch-wide ledge outisde the fifth floor of Mary Markley Hall on a dare Sunday. She fell after tripping on the long robe she was wearing.

Miss Waskerwitz, a liberal arts student from Holland, Mich., was listed in fair condition at university hospital, Miss Tilchin was released from the hospital after an examination.

Canadian NATO Troops Reach Norway

BODOE, Norway (UPI) — NATO troops from Canada, Italy, Britain and the United States were flown into various airfields in northern Norway Tuesday as the multi-nation Arctic Express exercise got underway.

Military spokesmen at Bodoe airfield said at least 60 aircraft unloaded troops and military equipment before they returned to their bases.

Arctic Express is primarily a winter manoeuvre testing the mobility of NATO's ace mobile force, which is headed by Maj.-Gen. Alberto Li Cobbi of Italy.

CLUE: IT DOESN'T COLLECT GARBAGE

CRDB Is Everywhere . . . But Goodness, What Is It?

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Capital Regional District Board met this afternoon.

So what?

Local politicians admit, from time to time, that the regional board is little understood by the general public.

Probably the concept and the name are difficult to grasp.

After all, there are seven municipalities, four school boards and several single-purpose boards to serve southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, with a population less than half that of Vancouver city.

The chairman of the regional board, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, once said a priority for board directors is to explain its powers, limitations and structure.

He had heard, for example, that an Oak Bay woman blamed her increased assessment on the regional district. (The district has nothing to do with assessments.) In another case, a Saanich taxpayer thought local parks were under control of the region. (They aren't.)

And another thought was that the regional board will move to amalgamate fire and police services. (Highly unlikely.)

The board is only responsible for area-wide problems assigned to it.

This includes, at this time, regional sewerage and disposal (but not local sewerage construction), regional parks (but not local parks), regional planning (but not local planning and zoning), and control of fireworks.

It also acts as agent for some local services in unorganized areas — the Centennial swimming pool and Colwood racetrack park, for example.

The companion Capital Regional Hospital Board is reponsible for local hospital financing and expansion.

What next?

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health is expected to join the growing number of "functions" handled by the multi-purpose regional board. Garbage disposal (but not collection) is expected to follow.

Is the regional district approach the back-door route to amalgamation?

Some argue that the regional approach has made the old issue of amalgamation irrelevant because (at least some) area-wide problems are being or will be tackled on an area-wide basis.

Others say the regional district simply handles the problems that individual municipalities can't or don't want to cope with. And that amalgamation, recently in the news, would be inevitable without it.

Who is on the regional board?

There are 18 directors, representing the municipalities and unorganized areas on southern Vancouver Island and in the Gulf Islands. Representation by directors and votes they have is weighted according to population.

The directors are: Victoria city — Mayor Courtney Haddock, Ald. Percy Frampton, Ald. Cecil Parrott; Saanich — Mayor Hugh Curtis, Ald. Edith Gunning, Ald. Leslie Passmore; Oak Bay — Mayor Frances Elford; Esquimalt — Mayor Arthur Young; Central Saanich — Mayor Archibald Galbraith; North Saanich — Mayor James Cumming; Sidney — Ald. W. W. Gardner; View Royal — Al Beasley; Sooke — Howard Elder; Colwood — Richard Emery; Salt Spring Island — M. H. Holmes; Langford — Earl Pallister; outer Gulf Islands — Joan Purchase; Metchosin — Ken Rainey.

Who works for the regional district?

There is an executive director, Bill Long, who has an assistant, John Bericoff. Former Esquimalt municipal engineer Bill Gerry now is the regional district's engineer.

The former Capital Region Planning Board disappeared two months ago and became part of the Capital Regional District, with its planning director Tony Roberts and staff continuing their duties under a new label.

How do you get elected to the regional board?

Most of the directors are appointed by their respective councils. So while the public elects its council members, it does not elect its regional district directors.

Several suggestions have been made in the past for direct election by the public of regional district directors in the municipalities.

In the unorganized areas, because there is no municipality, there is direct election of representatives by the public.

Can you attend regional district meetings?

Yes, they are open and meetings are held on the fourth Wednesday of the month at 2 p.m. at 208 Burnes House, Bastion Square.

'I'm a Poor Little Sheep . . .'

Udderly rejected by the rest of the flock is this lamb, one of two born on the Oldfield Road farm of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hoole this month. The ewe was unable to feed them and other ewes rejected them when they tried to get themselves adopted. The lambs had to settle for Mrs. Hoole as bottle-nurse but they're still trying to get into the flock.

One Woman Blamed It For Assessment Hike

Double Parking Fines Proposed by Mayor

Speaking to the Victoria Real Estate Board Haddock said there was little doubt in his mind that 60 per cent of all overtime parking offenders are repeaters.

"What we are doing is renting them a portion of the street for a dollar," he said. "They just park their cars, feed the meter throughout the day and — if they forget — just simply pay a dollar fine."

The mayor said he felt sure doubling the fine would convince meter-feeders that they should be parked off the street.

An approach to the Downtown Businessmen's Association for an opinion on the proposed fine increase had failed to bring a response, the mayor said in an interview.

NO ANSWER

"I asked the downtown people what they thought of my idea but they haven't answered my letter. I was hoping they'd tell me that they'd back the idea of putting the overtime parking fine up to $2."

Later this year the Downtown Businessmen's Association will be pushing for an affirmative vote to clear the way for a new 400-car parking facility on Johnson Street.

In the past the association has asked for action to eliminate the all-day on-street parker in the downtown area.

PETERSON PRESSES QUEBEC

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Tuesday he isn't satisfied with a letter from Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul explaining the beating of a B.C. Civil Servant in Quebec City Feb. 1.

He said he does not want to make details of the explanation public at this time because he wants to give the Quebec minister a chance to provide "further information I will request of him" in the beating of Walter Redel, B.C. lands director, while on government business in Quebec.

Redel was pistol-whipped by police after being mistaken for a bank robber.

Peterson said he would send a telegram to Paul asking for more information.

Redel underwent surgery to treat a cracked bone above one eye which resulted from the beating.

Suspect Jumps Into Harbor

City police nabbed a robbery suspect who jumped into the Inner Harbor shortly before noon today to evade capture.

The chase followed a robbery at one of the shops in Bastion Square. Preliminary reports indicated two youths fled after grabbing about $4 from the till in Bonnie's Boutique.

The suspect jumped into the water and swam to the Department of Transport docks near the Johnson Street bridge where he was arrested by officers.

At noon police were still combing the area for the second thief.

Early indication were the pair may have attempted an earlier grab-and-run theft at one of the other shops in the square.

Three burglars early this morning also broke into the Rice Bowl, 2656 Quadra, and stole about $200 from proprietor Don Lim.

Lim was assualted and was forced to hand over the money. They escaped, but police obtained a good description of the men.

MOST IN PROVINCE

City Leads in New Houses

Metropolitan Victoria was the only large centre in the province to show an increase in dwelling starts last month, a marked contrast to the rest of Canada.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. B.C. region reports the entire gain in housing starts for January, compared with January 1969, is attributable to Victoria, which had 170.6 per cent increase.

Vancouver and all other B.C. centres of more than 10,000 population reported declines, as did all other CMHC regions reporting across the country.

In metro Victoria — including six organized areas, Indian reserves and unorganized territory to Langford — there were 525 new housing starts compared with 194 in the first month of 1969. The gain was due entirely to new rental accommodation, CMHC said.

The latter rose by 380.8 per cent from 94 a year ago to 452 units last month. Single family homes dropped 27 per cent from 100 to 73.

CMHC says the Victoria area had 3,744 dwelling starts in 1969 and 2,687 completions. In January 1970 there were 2,472 units under construction in this area compared with 1,246 in the same month a year ago.

B.C. as a whole had 1,505 new housing starts last month, a 19 per cent increase from 1,264 in January 1969. The provincial rate of completions was 84.8 per cent above the same month last year and the inventory of new units under construction was 13,769, up from 10,000 in the month last year.

Vancouver's decline was marginal, from 978 to 950 new housing starts in January, mostly in the homeowner sector, with rental accommodation hardly changed at 658 unit starts against 664 last year.

The rest of the province showed a 67.4 per cent drop from 92 to 30 units in the same period.

Market conditions in the two metropolitan areas appear to be quite different. Victoria showed the highest inventory of completed but unoccupied dwelling units since December of 1966, 32.5 per cent higher than in January 1969.

Completions in the capital were up 135.6 per cent for a total of 271 units and producing an inventory of 435 units.

One-Day Reprieve On Licence Plates

You have until 5 p.m. Saturday to get 1970 licence plates for your car, truck, trailer or motorcycle.

B.C. Motor Vehicles Branch today announced extension of the deadline from 5 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Saturday. The issuing office, behind the Legislative Buildings on Belleville, will open at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Chauffeur licences will also be issued during those hours, but there will be no driver examinations Saturday.

It is expected more than 120,000 licence plates will have been sold by 5 p.m. Saturday — an increase of at least 10 per cent from 1969.

Computer figures show 108,720 licences were issued up to Feb. 19, including 77,274 passenger cars, 16,996 commercial vehicles, 2,140 motorcycles and 12,310 traliers.

The municipal office at Sidney will also open for the issue of licences Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Municipal licences for commercial vehicles will be available at Victoria city hall and Saanich municipal hall from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IF YOU ARE OF A MIND to hear a soldier's tale, listen while Second World War veteran Jim Short, of 1014 Burdett Avenue recalls a non-meeting with a famed Irishman that landed him in one guardhouse, saved him from another, and brought him a rare souvenir.

Jim Short's person fails to match his name. He is a large, vigorous, mustache-sporting Victorian of 52, very straight in the back and wide in the shoulders. Though his war is a long way behind him, he still retains something of the military look.

We met first on the party fishing vessel Lakewood, where Jim was then helping tourists to bait hooks and untangle gear. But it was only this week that he told me about his message from George Bernard Shaw.

The year was 1940, and Jim a 21-year-old private of our first wave. He had crossed from Canada with Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. In that summer of training and waiting, off-duty time hung heavy.

One idle hour in holding unit Camp Borden, he came on a newspaper piece about Shaw. It gave the playwright's address — 'Shaw's Corners, Ayot St. Lawrence, Hertfordshire'.

"What we should do," Jim suggested to Princess Pats Private Jack Scholey, 'is go pay him a call."

As Jim explains it now, they were young, and not of a mind to let difficulties stand in their way. Also, they had 24 hours to kill. So they took off from Borden in Hampshire, hitchiked into London, and out again along the Great North Road.

The day was well along when they arrived at Shaw's retreat. Disappointment waited them. The great man was sojourning in Whitehall.

But Shaw's housekeeper was kind to the soldiers from Canada. She invited them in and gave them tea, then insisted that they leave a note for her employer.

This Jim did. Then the pair started back to camp, which they figured on reaching with time to spare.

"We got a lift from a corporal," Jim remembers. "He became suspicious because we didn't have our respirators as required. The corporal began to ask uncomfortable questions. When he learned we'd taken off from Borden without a pass, he delivered us to the guardroom at Hatfield Hospital."

Next morning, the two arrived under escort at Borden, to be marched before their company commander. But let Jim tell it.

"He asked what we had to say for ourselves. I got as far as telling him 'We went up to see George Bernard Shaw', then he stopped me with lifted hand.

" 'Hold it!' he said. 'That's a new one. I'm so sick of hearing tired old stories that I'm willing to accept a fresh one at face value. Case explained!' "

Did GBS answer the note? No, not exactly. But Jim and his friend were talking up their attempt a few weeks later — and absorbing heavy kidding — when a postcard arrived from Shaw's Corners.

'Mr. Bernard Shaw engaged in heavy literary tasks . . . resolutely abstains from private correspondence . . .' and so on in the firmest of terms.

However, a hand-written screed small, black and positive, occupied all areas that the formal print left bare.

"In reply to an undated letter just discovered: I am painfully conscious — being a shy sort of man — of my position as one of the sights of this country; and it serves me right if people gaze at me and whisper my hissing name as I pass. But I have too few years to live (perhaps none) to allow even the Canadian contingent, much less the whole British army, more than a passing glance.

"Just count up what it would mean if you all came to tea with me. No more plays, no more prefaces, no more hours off parade all to myself. Spare me.

G. Bernard Shaw."

And in a skinny line across the other end of the card: "Still, your adventures made a good story for me."

Jim let me study this Shavian gesture with its kind touch added for the benefit of a Canadian far from home. Then he said, "He didn't answer the note, you see, but I wrote a letter when we got back. I told him about the night in the guardhouse, and what our company commander said. It must have amused him."

Shaw, despite his predicted few years or perhaps none to live, survived with vinegary stubborness until 1950. Private Jack Scholey of the Princess Pats bought it in Sicily. But Jim Short came home to Victoria with stories to tell, and Shaw's note to back up this one of them.

What's that message and signature worth? He doesn't know, and neither do I. But perhaps some reader can enlighten him.

Bill WALKER

This was a weekend in the boondocks; or as they say in the shower: curling can be fun, if you don't like sleep.

It all started innocently enough with an invitation to participate. The shock was to come later. Transportation would leave at 8 sharp in the morning. This wasn't too bad, except that it happened to follow a necessary period of duty the evening before.

But after all, the first game was to be at 12:20, and so the schedule was met.

This was the AVCC bonspiel. The site was the Alberni Valley Curling Club, and 48 top-flight rinks, 22 of them vistiors, would dispute the honors.

Now, ours wasn't a Consols rink in the true sense of the word, although capabilities of such possibility had been implied.

Some of the members had spoken with Consols skips in years since past, and had played with them in competition.

For example, our skip-to be had more than a passing acquaintance with a curler of some renown.

At least Maurice Tellier spoke of a chap named Gervais in endearing terms, and referred to Alberta's representative in the 1970 Macdonald Brier competition as "Hec."

A search of avilable records indicated that our skip was self employed and sold money for a living in downtown Victoria.

A search of the minds of others revealed that he personally did know "Hec" and had been taught by him how to make a shot or two, and could!

Our third was equally experienced and a past champion in the Alberni Valley and other provincial centres. His experience would be invaluable. For he, too, had flirted with a Brier berth as a one-time lead for Tony Gutoski. Tony had made it all the way in 1958, but had failed in other seasons. It was one one of these other occasions that Jim Tang played the lead position.

Since then, he had acquired a tennis elbow, which might or might not prevent him throwing his usually effective running outturns. But skip didn't know this. He didn't ask.

It appeared to be an honor when it was suggested that I play second. But there was a reason. The lead wasn't there to argue the point. He was coming later by private carriage and had been outvoted.

I was informed that my simple task would be to clear up any garbage that may be left around after lead rocks, and then, having completed that chore, the game would take its eventual course.

And I wondered at the time who could be the lead, if this opportunity, replete with the responsibility, was to be my lot in this event of major status.

Shortly before noon, I was to be advised, officially.

Our lead arrived. He was a dispenser of libations, and had been thus engaged professionally on his route north. Some of his samples were later to ease the tensions of competitive stress, for which we were grateful. But that is another story.

Besides, Tommy Tomkinson had been in the prizes at Duncan and Esquimalt, had met the Scottish curlers in competition, and also was ex-Air Force.

The first qualifications put him in a curling class with the skip and third. The latter won him over completely as a bridge partner.

And there we were, a likely looking crew that never once failed to arrive on time.

But with the competition, things didn't exactly work out the way they had been envisioned.

We won a few games, lost a few, took one from Alberni's Bob Reid in an extra end at 4:30 in the morning for the doubtful right to meet Jim Armstrong at 10 the same morning.

It was doubtful, all right, until the second end.

Skip had saved us in the first by psyching Armstrong into missing a takeout which would have given him six.

It wasn't until a few games had been played, that it became apparent to me that there was something I was doing that was displeasing the skip. Finally, he could stand it no longer.

He called me aside to partake of his advice. And I listened intently, naturally.

"It isn't," he said kindly, "and with the score 5-2 for the opposition," that I deplore you missing the rock completely on a takeout, but when you don't even make the rings, it poses a problem for the next shooter."

"Agreed," I replied. "I can appreciate the problem," and then promptly made 16 out of my next 17 shots, (by my count, not his.) I thought this was a fair percentage, and so did our lead, Mr. Tomkinson. For he was not missing much either. (by his count, and if we would only sweep.)

Of course, all this was over two games. One already had been lost. The second was about to be. And it turned out that this amazing show had embarrassed our leaders. They held several discussions mostly concerning our whereabouts in earlier matches, but resolved nothing. Not even the game.

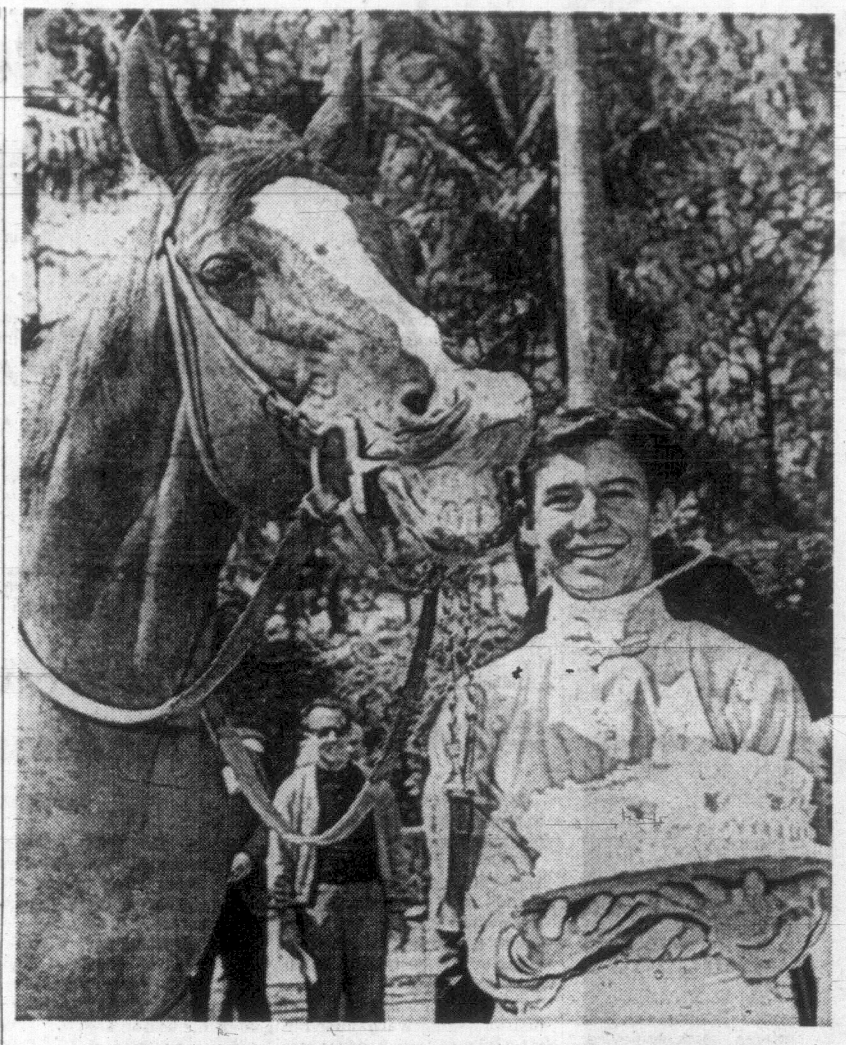
Finally, the end came, as it must, and much earlier than for several of the others.

In the post mortems it was implied that we were often good, even very good, but never together, or in the same game. And there were no recriminations from the vice-skip and skip over how the front end had performed, or vice versa, as is so often the case with unsuccessful rinks, and poor losers.

That is if you can ignore Mr. Tomkinson's remark which came in a moment of duress and after having lost the bridge game:

"You'll never catch me being light when the other guys are lying four — in the back rings, and the front is open," he declared for leads everywhere.

Which may be why we came home in pairs, separately.



SO MUCH FOR 'PEOPLE FOOD'

Apparently taste of "people food" doesn't meet unqualified approval of thoroughbred Gulf's Pride, who displays molars after nibbling on birthday cake of jockey Craig Perret at the Hialeah track in Florida. Young rider received cake and was serenaded by fans in paddock as he celebrated 19th birthday. (AP Wirephoto)

Otterson, Hill Lead; MacRae Nips Phillips

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — "When do we play you guys?" Saskatchewan skip Jim Hill shouted across the crowded foyer to the Calgary rink.

"Tomorrow? That'll be a knockdown, drag-'em-out a f-fair."

The quiet Delisle, Sask., farmer was talking about today's fifth round of the Canadian seniors' curling championship and he knew full well he would be playing Slim Otterson of Calgary, who has had part or all of the lead since the tournament began Monday.

UNBEATEN RECORD

Otterson has a record of four wins and no losses here and an unbeaten streak that stretches back 16 games to the start of the city playdowns in Calgary.

But he knows Hill will be tough in a game which could decide the outcome of the 11-rink round-robin event.

"Jimmy is a Brier veteran and he's playing against a lot of good rinks," said the 55-year-old rookie among the old-timers.

The Calgary rink took a pair of victories Tuesday, dumping Joe Herrick of St. John's, Nfld., 11-4 and John Hibbard of Sherbrooke, Que., 9-3.

Hill had a bye in the morning's third round and started the afternoon off right by defeating Lawrence Carter of Amherst, N.S., 9-5. It was his third win in two days and left him in a second-place tie with Howard Wood, Jr., of Winnipeg.

The Manitoba skip lost an 8-5 lead in the ninth end and only a miss by skip Stan Brooker of Noranda with his last rock in the 10th allowed him to gain a 9-8 decision over Northern Ontario.

WON ON DRAW SHOT

It was the second loss for Phillips, the 61-year-old Ontario skip, and it came after he shrugged off a 7-3 deficit, taking two in the ninth end and another two in the 10th.

Phillips was lying three in the 11th when MacRae hooked a draw shot to the four-foot circle for the winner. The B.C. skip needed only eight ends to dispose of winless John Kilburn of Fredericton, N.B., 8-1, and bring his win-loss record to 3-1.

Arraignments Set Monday

DETROIT (AP) — Federal court arraignments are scheduled Monday for 10 men indicted by a grand jury investigating country-wide gambling and its relationship to the sports world.

The indictments, made public Tuesday, named baseball Hall of Fame pitcher Jerome (Dizzy) Dean as one of six co-conspirators, but not a defendant.

Saskatoon Rink Still Unbeaten

CALGARY (CP)—It was "awful" for Alberta, but the first five-ender in the Canadian women's curling championship was just great for Saskatchewan.

It came in the fourth round Tuesday night, broke a 3-3 tie, and sent Dorenda Schoenhals of Saskatoon into sole possession of first place with Saskatchewan's fourth win in succession.

The 10-4 loss was Alberta's fourth in a row and dropped Betty Cole of Edmonton into last place in the 10-rink, round-robin competition.

Donna Clark of Burnaby saw her British Columbia rink suffer its first defeat, 8-5 at the hands of Kay O'Neill of Ontario, a setback that dropped B.C. into a tie for second place with Manitoba.

Manitoba pulled even with B.C.'s 3-1 record in the fourth round when Glenda Buhr of Winnipeg tripped New Brunswick, skipped by Shirley Pilson of Bathurst, 11-6.

WAS TOUGH ONE

"That was our toughest one," Mrs. Schoenhals said after the Alberta game in which Saskatchewan had its lowest margin of victory.

The Saskatoon team's previous wins were 12-5 over Quebec, 11-3 over Newfoundland and 12-4 over New Brunswick. Their last three games went only nine ends, one fewer than regulation.

World's Best Skiers In Vancouver Today

VANCOUVER (UPI) — More than 100 of the world's finest skiers were due to arrive here today to prepare for Canada's only World Cup event, the DuMaurier International, later this week.

The 14-nation meet, the third-to-last on the World Cup calendar, gets underway at 10:00 a.m. Thursday on Grouse Mountain and runs through to Sunday, March 1.

Both DuMaurier events — slalom and giant slalom—carry full World Cup points for men and women.

For the past two seasons, the Canadian meet has been the deciding race for the World Cup individual championships and observers here feel there will be no change this year.

Canada's Nancy Greene Raine took the women's cup in 1968 before a home-town crowd at Rossland while Jean-Claude Killy of France clinched the men's title at the same meet. In 1969 Austria's Gertrud Gabl and Karl Schranz, who currently leads men's standings, captured the individual crowns at Mont Ste. Anne, Quebec.

Hopes of First Place Fade As Cougars Edged by Cents

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Hockey isn't confined to physical superiority. Mental conditioning also is part of the game, as Victoria Cougars discovered on the evening of February 24.

The Cougars weren't quite as ready as they planned to be Tuesday and Vancouver Centennials walked out of Memorial Arena with a 3-2 British Columbia Junior Hockey League victory.

It took the steam out of Victoria's hopes of repeating as first-place finishers.

The Memorial Arena result, combined with Vernon Essos' 6-0 victory over Penticton Broncos, forced the Cougars to move over and share the lead. The other share and greatest advantage belongs to Vernon because both teams have 63 points but the Essos can claim two games in hand.

Now, the situation is quite obvious. Cougars need to win both of their remaining games (tonight, against New Westminister and Saturday, against Vernon) while expecting "outside" help.

CALLED FROM SURREY

That help can come tonight when Vernon visits fourth-place Kamloops, or Friday, when the Essos move into Vancouver against coach Ron Matthews' spoiling Centennials. Vernon's final league game will be played Sunday in New Westminster.

The Centennials were the spoilers Tuesday because they decided to recruit a junior "B" player, Lloyd Bitner, and partly because of the Cougars' generosity.

Bitner, called up from the Surrey Stampeders, figured in all three goals. He scored twice after setting up Fred Lawless for the first Vancouver counter.

But as it turned out, Victoria penalties, and not Bitner, proved to be Vancouver's greatest asset.

Bitner scored his first goal while Cougars' Bruce Cowick was serving a holding penalty midway in the game. He added his second, and the game-winner, while Cowick and Victoria defenceman Laurie Moore granted Centennials a two-man advantage.

ADDITIONAL PENALTY

The game-winner came early in the third period, but if Cougars hoped for a comeback, it was quelched by the rambucious play of Moore.

Called for interference 46 seconds after Cowick was waved off, Moore started swinging at Vancouver's Pat Russell. The Vancouver player wisely covered up, and Moore was tagged with an additional major penalty.

There was time enough for Cougars to mount a late attack. The threat appeared to be taking shape but Moore squelched it by taking a double minor at the 13:44 mark.

Moore drew a holding penalty when Russell appeared in position for a breakaway. The Vancouver player, as before backed off, and Moore's only reward was a four-minute cooling-off period.

It capped a frustrating evening for the Cougars and the partisans among the turnout of 2,592. Victoria appeared headed for their first victory in four games against Centennials by out-shooting Vancouver 11-3 and 16-3 over the first two periods.

The Cougars accomplished the territorial edge in the first two periods with good fore-checking and body contact and a reasonable passing game.

Essos Romp Past Broncos

VERNON (CP) — Penticton Broncos fell before a hard-driving Vernon onslaught Tuesday and suffered a 6-0 British Columbia Junior Hockey League loss before 950 fans here.

The win moved Essos into a tie for first place with Victoria Cougars.

Lawrence Quechuk paced the attack with a two-goal performance, chalking up markers in the first and third periods. Don Manson, John Price, Barry Bleakley and Dale Craig added singles.

Vernon led 5-0 going into the second period but were held scoreless by Penticton until 5:48 of the third when Quechuk got the final goal.

Hunting Fees Boosted By Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — It's going to cost more money for out-of-province hunters to bag big game in Alberta.

The cabinet has decided that it now will cost $200 for each mountain sheep and grizzly bear, $100 each for moose, elk and caribou and $50 each for white tail deer, mule deer and game birds.

Previously, non-Canadian hunters could buy one licence to shoot up to one of each of four animals: sheep, goat, grizzly and one antlered animal.

Some licence fees for resident Albertans also will change. For mountain sheep, caribou and grizzly bear the licence now will cost $10, up from $7.50. Guide licences will cost $50 and $25, up from $2.50.

McLAIN FORBIDDEN TO VISIT TIGER PLAYERS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Tuesday he would not permit Denny McLain, suspended Detroit pitcher, to meet with his Tiger mates in the clubhouse as proposed by some Tiger players.

"I have ordered Denny to dissociate himself from professional baseball entirely," said Kuhn, "so any meeting in the clubhouse would be out of order. I would have to say no."

Kuhn declined to answer other queries about the case of McLain, whom he suspended indefinitely Thursday for his "involvement in 1967 bookmaking activities and his associations at the time."

Rich's Price Falls; Ken's Tresses, Too

By The Associated Press

Richie Allen's asking price and Ken Harrelson's ears have been lowered considerably, giving St. Louis Cardinals a dubious gain of $15,000 and Harrelson's barber a solid windfall of $15.

Allen's salary impasse with the Cardinals, who liberated him from Philadelphia Phillies last fall in the Curt Flood trade, was lessened somewhat Tuesday when the controversial slugger reduced his original demand of $155,000 to $140,000.

Jim Toomey, the St. Louis assistant general manager, confirmed that some adjustment had been made, but added, "We're still not close to an agreement."

Harrelson, meanwhile, arrived in Cleveland Indians' camp at Tucson, Ariz., and was immediately offered an option: Have his shoulder-length tresses trimmed or face a $1,000 fine.

"I figure I saved myself $985," said Harrelson after shelling out $15 to a hair stylist. "It's probably the best investment I ever made."

GOT APPROVAL

Harrelson, beginning the second year of a two-year contract, passed manager Alvin Dark's post-haircut inspection and joined his team-mates in the club's first full-scale workout, conducted without unsigned first baseman Tony Horton.

Horton became an official holdout with the passing of the Indians' reporting date for regulars, as did Bobby Murcer, Horace Clarke and Jerry Kenney of New York Yankees, among others.

First baseman Ed Kranepool signed with the World Series champion New York Mets for an estimated $40,000, leaving only outfielder Ron Swoboda outside the fold, and pitcher Jim Palmer agreed to terms with Baltimore's American League pennant winners for a reported $30,000. The Orioles have not signed 20-game winner Dave McNally, sluggers Frank Robinson and Boog Powell, and second baseman Dave Johnson.

Sonics Grab Fifth Place

SEATTLE (AP) — Bob Rule poured in 29 points Tuesday night to guide Seattle Supersonics to a 130-122 National Basketball Association victory over San Francisco.

By virtue of the win, Seattle moved ahead of the Warriors and into fifth place in the muddled western division race. Rule got plenty of assistance from guard Dick Snyder, who contributed 26 points—including a string of nine consecutive field goals.

Victory evened the two clubs' series at three games each this season. They will clash again Friday night in San Francisco in a crucial test for both.

DANNY THOMAS READY . . . . . TO TAKE OVER DATES

Strike May Erase Tee Tourney

MAIMI (AP) — A strong possibility developed Tuesday that the $200,000 National Airlines Open Invitational Golf Tournament may be cancelled.

The Associated Press learned that an alternate sponsor, Danny Thomas, was ready to take over the vacated dates on the pro golf tournament schedule.

The National Airlines tourney currently is scheduled to be played at the Country Club of Miami March 26 to 29, the last of five stops on the rich Florida tour.

The tournament is sponsored by National Airlines, currently undergoing a strike by about 3,500 members of the Air Line Employees Association.

The Second Danny Thomas-Diplomat tourney was scheduled to be played late this year, Dec. 3 to 6, but that also has been cancelled, the AP learned Tuesday.

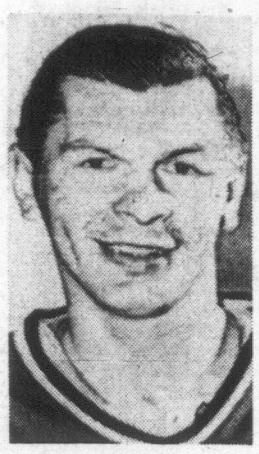
In view of that cancellation, and the possibility of open dates in about a month, promoters of the Danny Thomas immediately offered to take over.

Rumors concerning the National Airlines tournament came to a head Tuesday with a formal announcement by Joe Dey, commissioner of the Tournament Players' Division of the PGA. His brief announcement said:

"National Airlines has been discussing with TPD (Tournament Players Division) the feasibility of trying to proceed with the tournament scheduled March 26 to 29, 1970, in light of the National Airlines strike. No decision has been reached. TPD is exploring the possibility of other sponsorships if National Airlines declines."

Corset Helping Mikita In Late Scoring Surge

By The Canadian Press



STAN MIKITA
. . . back problem

"Sometimes the puck goes in and sometimes it doesn't," said Stan Mikita, the man who right now finds the puck going into the net for him at a rapid rate.

Despite a back ailment which forces him to wear a corset, the Chicago Black Hawks centre has put on a late-season burst to push his goal-scoring total to 35, tops in the National Hockey League.

Mikita and his team-mates have their eyes on a playoff spot, and that is the reason the 29-year-old Czech-born player gives for his scoring success.

"Every time I go on the ice I try to go all out," he said.

"We have 19 games to play. Our next six games are on the road. If we can break even or better on this road trip, I think we'll be in good shape for a Stanley Cup playoff spot. That's all I'm thinking of."

The Hawks, now holding fourth spot in the Eastern Division, a point ahead of Detroit Red Wings, will certainly have to do better than break even to keep pace. The Red Wings have held the last playoff spot most of the season and lost it to the Hawks only last Sunday due to a 1-0 shutout at the hands of Montreal Canadiens.

Mikita says his back has been so painful it was difficult for him to get up some mornings.

"I would struggle up, walk around slowly and gradually start moving better," he said. "Then I would have rub downs and go out and play.

RESTRICTS MOVEMENTS

"I wear this corset day and night now. I've worn it for one full game and two-thirds of another. It restricts my movements and breathing a little and I can't stay out there as long."

Mikita said he suffered the back injury in a game last year and it got worse this season.

"At first the doctor said the only thing that would help would be a complete rest for a couple of weeks. Well, I certainly couldn't do that with us trying to sew up a playoff spot. The corset seems the answer."

BACKSTROM'S BACK BAD

Another player bothered by recurring back trouble is Ralph Backstrom of the Canadiens, who will miss tonight's game when Pittsburgh Penguins visit Montreal.

The Canadiens are also without left winger John Ferguson and utility forward Christian Bordeleau, both recovering from fractured cheekbones, but right winger Bobby Rousseau will be back in the lineup tonight. Rousseau sat out last weekend's games with a groin injury.

Deadline Near As Kings Plan More Trades

By The Canadian Press

Less than two weeks remain before the final buzzer sounds on National Hockey League player trades and at least two clubs have indicated they are trying to set up some last-minute swaps.

Los Angeles Kings, who last Friday announced trades with Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks involving 12 players, say they will attempt more trades before the league's March 7 season deadline for such transactions.

And in Toronto, Maple Leafs general manager Jim Gregory said he is "doing a lot of talking," but would not say with which clubs.

The East Division Leafs, like the Kings in the West, are in last place and face the task for rebuilding.

In New York meanwhile, the Rangers, East Division leaders, are having defensive problems although manager-coach Emile Francis claims to have the situation under control.

The Rangers lost all-star defenceman Jim Nielson with pulled knee ligaments two weeks ago and last Thursday rearguard Brad Park suffered a broken ankle in a game at Detroit.

CALLED ON ROOKIES

Francis has had to call on rookies Allan Hamilton, Larry Brown and Mike Robitaille to fill the gaps.

Hamilton has been the extra fifth defenceman at New York all season while Brown was called up from the Buffalo farm club in the American Hockey League and Robitaille from Omaha in the Central League.

Rod Seiling and Arnie Brown, the remaining regulars on defence, are paired with Hamilton and Larry Brown while Robitaille is the fifth man.

Meanwhile Montreal Canadiens, the defending Stanley Cup champions, are still without left-winger John Ferguson and Monday announced that utility forward Christian Bordeleau will be lost for at least a month. Both players have fractured cheekbones.

SHORE SELECTED

In other hockey developments this week, Eddie Shore, one of game's alltime great defence men and one of its most colorful and controversial characters, was named to receive the 1970 Lester Patrick Memorial Trophy.

The award is for outstanding service to hockey in the United States and will be presented to the former Boston star at a dinner here March 9.

Shore, also a longtime owner of the Springfield team in the American Hockey League, played for Boston in the National League for 13 seasons, beginning in 1927.

He was the NHL's most valuable player four times and made the allstar team seven times.

Born in Fort Qu'Appelle Cupar, Sask., 67 years ago, Shore played for the Melville Millionaires in 1924, turning professional with Regina Caps of the Western Canada League the following year.

He retired as a player in 1940 and purchased Springfield Indians of the AHL and was constantly embroiled with his players in disputes over money and working conditions.

One such dispute led to his selling all the players he owned to Los Angeles Kings of the NHL.

"I've tamed down a lot," he said three years ago. "When you suffer eight heart attacks in five years you have to take it a little easier."

BOWLER OF WEEK

Collecting weekly award in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest for second time this season is Sandra Wood, who had earlier won women's five-pin in sixth week of annual competition. Sandra has now made it a double by capturing distaff tenpin award in 18th week, topping division with 188-213-167—568 series in Tuesday All-Star League at Mayfair Lanes.

Paper Claims Ashley Fined For Rule Flub

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minneapolis Tribune said Tuesday referee John Ashley and two linesmen have been fined for a rule misinterpretation in a National Hockey League game Feb. 19 in Chicago.

The newspaper said the fines were handed down by referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison, but no amount was mentioned.

Ashley, the newspaper said, erroneously allowed Chicago Black Hawks' Keith Magnuson to leave the penalty box after Minnesota North Stars scored in their 3-2 loss to Chicago.

Chicago's Pit Martin already was in the penalty box and the rule states that only the player who made his team short-handed can leave the box when a goal is scored.

Simon Fraser Wins

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (CP) — Simon Fraser University of Vancouver took a 95-91 win over Alaska Methodist University here Tuesday night in their final inter-collegiate basketball game of the season.

Point Margin Produces Title for Independents

Independents captured the Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League crown Tuesday night at Central Junior High School on the strength of a final-game victory coupled with some earlier wins.

Last-place Century Inn fell victims, 78-52, to Independents in the last regularly-scheduled game of the season for both clubs.

Hotel Douglas finished in a tie for points with Independents by downing Farmer Construction 108-76 in the other final tussle.

Independents won the title, however, on the strength of a point margin earned in games against the Hotelmen. Both teams won four of their eight games during the season with the Hotelmen winning the last three, but Independents held a 568-527 edge in scoring.

Don Frampton canned 12 of his 20 points in the final half as Independents padded a 33-16 half-time lead. Bill Carlson added 16 points for the league-champions while Ed Steele paced Century with 14.

Rod Field sank 20 points to lead six Hotel Douglas players into double figures and overbalance the massive scoring punch of Bill Spotswood (30 points) and Jim Cunningham (21) for Farmers.

Hotelmen had tallied up a 51-32 lead by the intermission.

Victory by Runners Ends Canuck Skein

VANCOUVER (CP)—Phoenix Roadrunners, led by Larry Lund's three-goal performance, grabbed a 6-4 Western Hockey League victory Tuesday night over first-place Vancouver Canucks before 8,766 fans.

The victory moved Phoenix to within three points of fourth-place Seattle Totems and stopped Vancouver's record number of consecutive home-ice victories at 23.

Phoenix led 2-1 at the end of the first period, 4-2 at the end of the second and traded goals with the Canucks in the final period.

He came back less than four minutes later and beat Vancouver netminder George Gardner from 25 feet to give the Roadrunners a 4-1 lead. Vancouver cut the margin to 4-2 on Hall's second goal of the game before Ward put the game out of reach with a goal at the 0:38 mark of the third period.

Bathgate picked up his 34th goal of the season at 8:48 before Lund got his third of the night at 10:03.

Cowichan Earns Spot In Island Tournament

DUNCAN — Cowichan eliminated Nanaimo from the Vancouver Island high school boys' basketball tournament, scheduled for Friday and Saturday at the University of victoria, without ever meeting the Hub City crew.

Campbell River dropped to third seeding and Alberni to fourth with Nanaimo left out in the cold. Courtenay captured the top berth on their home court by winning the northern tourney Saturday.

Brian Russell of Campbell River was leading scorer with 19 points and Dan Marschessaulk led Cowichan with 12 points, Campbell River had a 23-17 lead at half-time.

National Shuttle Stars Aim for Island Crowns

Macdonnell is the current provincial as well as Island champion and has won the Canadian crown seven times. Rollick won the national open title in 1968.

Gaps in Teeth, Telephones Leave Indians Wanting

By JOHN MIKA
Times Staff

EDMONTON — Gaps in teeth and telephones.

That just about sums up the main impressions of a whirlwind tour by Health and Welfare Minister John Munro which ended here last week after five days of jet, helicopter, bush plane and car travel over 2,500 miles to visit Indian health facilities in northern B.C. and Alberta.

The hectic journey produced a kaleidoscope of interlocking impressions but Munro probably will remember best the difficult radio-telephone communications which several times turned his own trip into a helter-skelter scramble through the snow and the wide gaps in the mouths of the many Indian leaders he spoke to.

They made it easy to imagine the agonies of bad teeth when a dentist might be seen only once in two or three years and the horror of impotent isolation while a relative dies painfully because there's no way of summoning help quickly.

Munro said much of the $2 million he will have available for new health services to Indians in the coming fiscal year will go towards improving dental services and communications in isolated communities.

The Agonies Of Bad Teeth

His department's budget for Indian health programs actually was increased 15 per cent for the coming year, one of the few areas given a major boost by Ottawa.

But about 60 per cent of the $5 million increase has to go into higher salaries and wages needed to recruit and hold the doctors, nurses and technicians that must be attracted to isolated and wintry areas as well as meeting the added costs of constructing and maintaining installations in the north.

Over all, his new budget of $38 million for roughly 250,000 registered Indians works out to a tolerable $150 per capita annually but it doesn't buy as much health service as it would in the south.

Several times during his tour, Munro made the point that if the provincial governments undertook the financial responsibility for mental health of the Indians now being treated in provincial insititutions and clinics, it would free another $2.3 million of his budget to provide new services.

"They (provinces) are providing the service now and we're only a cheque writing body when it comes to treating mental illnesses of Indians so it would involve only an administrative change but it would more than double the amount of money we would have for providing new services and facilities this year," Munro said.

There are only some 250 installations, ranging from hospitals in large centres to rented clinic space in small communities, spread through Canada to serve the more remote of the 2,400 reservations.

Munro said that his department has hired an electronics and communications expert who will examine the various communications problems in the north to suggest economical improvements.

In some cases, it may be to the department's advantage to set up its own communications but in other areas undoubtedly it will have to try to persuade existing organizations to meet its technical needs by doing the research itself.

Mobile dental clinics will be

purchased and put into operation for the first time this year, providing an on-the-spot dental surgery in place of examinations to determine who had to be flown out for treatment.

The department will hire dentists if it can or contract the services of private dentists to visit northern reserves in turn with these fully-equipped clinics.

Besides communications, Munro is concerned about physical access to remote areas to send doctors in and bring patients out in emergencies and — if the extra money can be found — he indicated he is thinking in terms of purchasing a helicopter or light plane as an ambulance service.

More likely, however, will be some effort to create a co-ordinated plan which would make existing military and civilian governmental aircraft available on a systematic basis to the medical services division.

The experiment with transportation allowances—annual sums turned over to Indian band councils after negotiation with the department—has been successful and will be expanded rapidly.

But, while probably improving the physical situation a little, this program is primarily a psychological boost giving reservers more responsibility and administrative control.

Of considerably greater importance, both psychologically and physically, is the success of pilot programs in training members of remote reserves as community aides and health workers.

Under this program, Indians —usually women whose families have grown up — are selected by the band and department for a three-month training course. In the case of aides it involves medical diagnostic terms, elementary drug dispensing, first aid, and handling a radio-telephone. Health workers are trained to explain preventive public health measures, such as the need for personal and community hygiene, vaccinations, balanced diets and reporting illness.

turn to their communities and are paid varying amounts monthly depending on such factors as degree of isolation, size of the community and special circumstances.

These workers are creating a two-way link between the communities and the department's health services that has proved reliable and of mutual benefit.

While still in its formative years, this program is beginning to develop a foundation of Indian interest in health matters on the reserve and could produce a climate which would inspire young Indians to become the future doctors and nurses their communities need.

During his visits to various white-staffed nursing stations in the north, Munro came face to face with the problem of disruptions in service when nurses—for their own mental health as well as meeting prevalent desires for new experiences—are rotated every year or two to another station or return to the cities of the south.

This system breaks continuity of service and one palliative being considered is recruiting the numerous high school dropouts found on reserves — usually because the children want to be reunited with their families rather than face the annual separation of going to school hundreds of miles away.

They could act as translators, clerks and perhaps train to become practical nurses, remaining in their own communities to provide the continuity lost through frequent rotation of the white nurses. Eventually, this could add further incentive to Indian girls to become registered nurses.

Dr. James Wiebe, an Arctic veteran who now is director-general of the health department's medical services, points out that as the country grows and fills in some of the vast spaces his division is able to turn over Indian health care delivery to private practitioners in the new and growing settlements while shifting its salaried doctors further north to the slowly declining number of isolated communities.

Dr. Ross Matthews, president of the Canadian Medical Association, accompanied Munro and Dr. Wiebe during this year's northern tour and appeared impressed particularly by the Indian response to an opportunity to handle their own problems.

He said the community aide and health worker program appeared to work well and deserves extension. He also said he was impressed by the reasonable and sensible complaints and suggestions made by Indian leaders wherever they met Munro.

Throughout the tour, Munro appeared consciously bent on demonstrating to Indians that he was a reasonable human being.

Informal by nature and blunt in manner, he went everywhere wearing a rumpled sweater and station-wagon coat, so that appearances didn't mark him out in the crowd.

He spoke plain Canadian instead of Ottawa officialese and was the first to go out and shake hands and chat with members of each community he visited, not waiting for his staff to line up a protocol list.

Each time the party arrived or departed at a community air strip saw the minister of health giving a hand with the loading and unloading of baggage.

In Kincolith, while waiting for a meeting to start in the community hall, Munro doffed his shoes and joined a line of Indian youths in gym strip practising set-up shots on the basketball court. At Habay, in Alberta, he insisted on an injured tot being flown to hospital aboard his plane and —even when there were no spectators to see it — carried the boy from the aircraft in his own arms to assist the mother.

At several meetings with Indian representatives who were critical of some of his department's policies, local government staff replied with a variety of explanations but Munro listened to both and promised he would delve further into each situation.

Occasionally he suggested ways in which the department could easily improve a policy.

Altogether, the health minister's tour was an exercise in diagnosis and building trust — the first steps a doctor would take in meeting a new patient.

Quebec's Premier Warming Up for Election

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There may be a fall election in Quebec.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told reporters Tuesday after the opening of the national assembly, one of three legislature openings during the day, that the assembly is scheduled to sit until June 13.

He said he also has to travel to Osaka, Japan, for Quebec Day at Expo '70 on June 25. Under the Electoral Act, an election can be held a minimum of 46 days after issuing election writs.

Earlier in the assembly, in fine election form, the premier ridiculed the Liberal opposition and its new leader, Robert Bourassa, 36, hitting at its inexperience and divisions in the party.

He paid a great deal less attention to Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebcois, saying Mr. Levesque provides "a bad answer to the real questions."

The 31 bills for the new Quebec session include an amendment to the Election Act, expected to increase government participation in financing election expenses and a medical care insurance act which would link Quebec to the federal medical care insurance program.

CABINET CHANGED

At the Ontario house opening, the throne speech said the structure of the cabinet will be revised to create a new department of mines and northern affairs and an enlarged department of citizenship.

Allan Lawrence, minister of mines, will become the minister of mines and northern affairs, heading a branch which will act as a communications channel between the north and Queen's Park and to co-ordinate programs carried out by other departments.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch will head the citizenship department which will be given responsibility for programs touching on human rights, leisure, recreation and cultural activities.

At Fredericton, a forecast of reform welfare and social development legislation was made in Brunswick house. It said the government will table a white paper during the session to provide for discussion of programs.

Legislation will also be introduced to carry out a major corrections report, shifting emphasis from imprisonment to rehabilitation of prisoners.

REBELS OPPOSE

In other legislatures:

St. John's — Three former Newfoundland cabinet ministers spoke in support of a non-confidence vote against Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberal government. It was the second non-confidence motion in two days, the other being defeated 21 to 8 Monday.

The latest motion was introduced by Clyde Wells (Ind. Liberal-Humber East), a former health minister; former justice minister T. Alex Hickman, and former finance minister H. R. V. Earle. It did not come to a vote before the house ended its night sitting.

Halifax—Premier G. I. Smith told the Nova Scotia house he is satisfied the federal government has done everything that can reasonably be done to clean up pollution at Chedabucto Bay as a result of the grounding of the tanker Arrow.

He said his government expects to be fully reimbursed for any damage claims and clean-up costs associated with oil spillage from the tanker. The compensation would also apply to fishermen or other individuals affected by polluted waters.

'FULL-FLEDGED DICTATORSHIP'

By KEVIN DOYLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition parties used a Commons debate on a national parks bill Tuesday to dig in against what they say is the government's trend toward a full-fledged dictatorship.

The charges came during second reading debate of a government bill to amend the National Parks Act, setting up a Crown corporation to administer property in all national parks.

Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca) said another Crown corporation would establish "beyond any doubt" the government's desire to seize absolute power.

"The ultimate will be to have each government department run by a Crown corporation with the prime minister directing them as a dictator," Mr. Yewchuk said.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) warned that the proposed corporation would have tremendous powers to control park development and the lives of park residents.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said his party strongly opposes the tendency "of this government to take over power and decision-making from the people."

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) said the bill contains an implication that a national park in his home province of Prince Edward Island will likely be made smaller.

Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South) said Banff and Jasper national parks now are being run essentially as colonies with decisions being made in Ottawa.

The townspeople there had no assurance that their aspirations were being considered and felt that they were being manipulated.

Mr. Peters said Jasper and Banff should become Alberta municipalities.

The creation of a Crown corporation and the philosophy of the government requiring parks to pay for themselves would only force up the cost of using them, Mr. Peters said.

Hate Talk Illegal ... Even in Home

OTTAWA (CP) — It should be a crime to advocate genocide at home or in the street, the Commons justice committee decided Tuesday night.

It voted down an attempt by Douglas Hogarth (L—New Westminster) to limit the new offence to public behavior.

Mr. Hogarth said the hate propaganda bill before the committee could make a living-room conversation a crime.

"It always starts with a couple of people in a living room," replied David Lewis (NDP—York South).

"That's the way the Hitler movement began, with little meetings of two and three people."

NEVER AN EXCUSE

Mr. McGuigan said there is no excuse for such conversation, public or private, if the intent is to destroy a group.

Justice Minister John Turner said prosecutions as a result of casual conversation obviously aren't likely.

The committee passed a clause that would make it a crime to promote or advocate the killing or destruction—by concentration camp, for example—of any section of the public distinguished by color, race, religion or ethnic origin. The offence would carry a prison term of up to five years.

In 1965 the government appointed a special committee under Maxwell Cohen, then law dean of McGill University, to study hate propaganda in Canada.

Members included Mr. McGuigan and Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

The committee's report resulted in the present bill, which passed the Senate last fall after a three-session battle.

SOME HAVE DOUBTS

There have been arguments that it will infringe upon freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

Paul St. Pierre (L—Coast Chilcotin) said he thinks the bill may do more harm than good.

He wondered whether an actor in a play portraying Himmler, the Nazi Gestapo chief, could be prosecuted.

Mr. Turner said that would depend upon the play.

The bill creates two other offences:

—Inciting in any public place hatred against any identifiable group, where this is likely to lead to a breach of the peace.

'Ice Study Unrelated To Any Water Sale'

OTTAWA (CP) — Resources Minister J. J. Greene reiterated in the Commons Tuesday that the government is not considering selling water to the United States.

Mr. Greene said three studies now going on in Canada concerning water have aroused some public concern and prompted his statement.

"I emphasize and reiterate that no possibility of sale or diversion of water to the United States is contemplated by these studies," the minister said.

He said a U.S. army corps ice survey on the Great Lakes was a research project designed only to provide information on the effects of ice decay on navigation.

Mr. Greene also said a federal-Ontario study of Northern Ontario waters was for the prime purpose of appraising the waters draining into Hudson Bay and James Bay for all foreseeable uses, excluding sales to the U.S.

The government was taking no part in the Great Replenishment and Northern Development canal project which he described as a "very general scheme" promoted by a private company.

Mr. Greene said some press reports indicated that water could be sold to the U.S. under the scheme.

But no water could be sold to the Americans "without the approval of the Government of Canada. No contemplation of such approval is under consideration by the government."

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said MPs had been concerned that water might be included in a "resource exchange package with the U.S."

"The minister made it clear that certainly this is not the case as far as he is concerned."

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said he feared the U.S. might make a demand for Canadian water in return for Canada selling its oil to the U.S.

Mr. Douglas said the government should seek the approval of Parliament before entering into any agreement to sell water.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1970 —PAGE 29

Church Auxiliaries Crumble Under Push for Integration

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — It is a slow and cautious process, but there is change going on among the churches' women's organizations.

The walls are being pushed out of the traditional hives of activity and members encouraged to turn their energies to the work of the church as a whole and of the community.

In some cases the formal structure of a separate women's organization is being dismantled to become part of the total organization of the church. In time these groups as they exist now may disappear completely.

The changes are an acknowledgement that the world has changed, and that some of the churches have as well. Where there is even a token willingness to accept women on administrative boards where they have never been accepted before, the idea of separate women's groups becomes less reasonable.

CAUSE HIGH FEELING

There is reason for the slow and cautious approach.

The changes have caused high feeling among some of the women who have worked hard and faithfully for their churches in the old way. There is little precedent for the changes, no pattern to follow in making them, so no one is absolutely certain where they will lead. Mrs. W. G. Waugh of Toronto national president of the Anglican Church Women, says there were a number of reasons behind the ACW decision to integrate with the mainstream of the church. The membership made the decision last May.

"The straight women's group is not fulfilling a purpose. We need men, women and children working together. We feel, certainly at the national level, that some duplication of time, money and woman hours could be eradicated.

"It is a different world. Women today see things in terms of people interest, not just women's. With more of them working, they are chary of their time and want to spend it doing things with their husbands and children."

CHANGE WITH CARE

Mrs. Waugh says whatever changes are made will be made carefully with as many local options left open as possible. The process has begun with the setting up of a task force made up of laity and clergy, ACW members and non-members.

"We are looking at it to consider the implications and with no idea of imposing anything on anyone."

She says there will have to be considerable local autonomy to suit individual churches. A congregation for instance, might find the old ways of raising money the most successful.

"A parish will have certain service and financial demands. As far as we can see, there will certainly be parishes which will have to augment their finances. I can see certain parishes where people would want to do this by voluntary giving and spend their time on social action or improving their own knowledge of their church.

"In some cases though, the fellowship of church work, of organizing a bazaar, really does serve a purpose.

"I don't think we can look far enough ahead to say what the parishes will be like in five years.

"Perhaps we can make Christian witness working in the community, in a hospital. Perhaps we don't need to be at the actual 'church.'"

MERGED TWO GROUPS

The United Church began a similar process of change eight years ago. It is still going on.

It merged its two women's groups into the United Church Women. A general board of women was formed plus two mission boards to incorporate the work of the women's groups with the general work of the church.

Since then a number of things have happened. The United Church has an increasing number of women taking an interest in the general administration of its churches, which leaves them less time for a separate women's organization.

A number of congregations have changed their structure to have one congregational organization that may have women's units as part of it. Activities are set up along the lines of interest in such congregations and not on the basis of men's, women's or youth groups. A few regions have organized the same way.

ALL PITCH IN

Patricia Clarke, associate editor of the United Church Observer, comments that one result could be that the good things the women have done will be done by the whole congregation.

"For instance, women have had experience in stewardship. They have raised the money."

If women's groups were no longer separate, everyone would have to pitch in.

She echoes Mrs. Waugh's comments that in some cases unity cuts down duplication of effort, but that local choice must be possible.

"What's right for a big city congregation may not be right for a more traditional congregation."

Childless Couple Tries For Test-Tube Baby

ATHERTON, England (UPI) — Sylvia Allen, 34, childless in her seven years of marriage, may become the first mother of a baby conceived in a test tube.

Eggs have been taken from Mrs. Allen and put in a test tube and fertilized by her husband, a gynecologist said Monday.

Mrs. Allen and her husband, Keith, have been unable to have children because her Fallopian tubes which carry eggs from her ovary are blocked, Dr. Patrick Steptoe said.

Steptoe said the fertilized egg will be transferred from its test tube to Mrs. Allen's womb in perhaps six weeks for expected normal growth.

Mrs. Allen volunteered for the experiment about 18 months ago.

Spokesmen at Cambridge University said the experiment was under way under the direction of Steptoe and physiologist Dr. Robert Edwards.

KNIT AND CHAT

By MAY MAC LEAN

Bulky Look Pared Down

Space did not permit me to tell you last week of all I saw at McCall's Hand-Knitting Fashion Show in New York, so I will continue this week.

The general over-all appearance of knitted fashions has certainly changed since the show was held five years ago.

The solid bulky look of the old knits has given way to the bare see-through look of the new crochets.

Crochet flower borders were used extensively on knitted skirts, dresses and shells, and it made a pleasing combination of both arts.

I am always amazed at the fashions that one can create with wool and a pair of needles or crochet hook. I realize that these are not practical for everyday wear, or for the average knitter, but it does give one a lift to see that knitting is not just for "little old ladies," and that hand-knitted garments can be just as fashionable as store bought clothes.

The T-shirt dress seems to be popular this year and is very adaptable to knitting. Slim, straight with a v-neckline, it represents a style that anyone can wear, any length, belted or unbelted.

And while we are talking of lengths, the show included all of them from mini minis barely covering the hips, to maxis that almost dragged the ground.

Several shawls were shown, nearly all fringed. One in particular caught my eye. It was in a magnificent paisley rose design, in all shades of red and pink on a black background. This shawl was deeply fringed in black.

Many ponchos were shown as well, again fringed and very colorful. I myself often wear one of these instead of a cardigan in spring and fall.

One of these ponchos was made by crocheting two big patterned and colorful squares for the front and back. Straight pieces were then knitted in garter-stitch in every bright color. These were sewn to the two crochet pieces, forming the poncho.

Why not experiment and work out your own designs in this way? It's fun to do, and who knows what exciting ideas you may come up with?

Here we have one of the more conservative see-through fashions for the junior miss. Sizes of the instructions are 4-6-8-10 and it is crocheted from a knitted worsted or sayelle weight of yarn. The crochet pattern is a very simple repeat of four rows.

To order Leaflet No. 6933, send 35c in coin or money order (no stamps or personal cheques please). Your order must be accompanied with a stamped fully self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to May E. Mac Lean, "Knit and Chat," care of the Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering, and to allow about two to three weeks for delivery.

Four rows repeat again and again to make this conservative see-through crocheted dress for the junior miss. Instructions are available for sizes four to ten.

Child Could Fly Airplane Says Blonde Woman Pilot

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

NEW YORK — A woman is wearing the pants in another formerly all-male sanctuary: the cockpit of a commercial airliner.

She is Turi Wideroe, a 32-year-old blonde from Oslo who has the height, the cheekbones and the long, shapely legs of a fashion model.

In 1968 Miss Wideroe was the first woman to be accepted into the 1,150-man pilot corps of Scandinavian Airlines System. She is believed to be the first woman pilot for a major commercial airline in the western world.

"Everybody is making such a big thing of it," she said in perfect English recently over brunch in her suite in the Biltmore Hotel. "But I don't see what difference sex makes. There have been doctors and lawyers and engineers for years who are women. And a modern aircraft is built so simply that a child could fly it."

Miss Wideroe is in North America for a three-week stay, during which she will visit Toronto, Chicago, Milwaukee, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle. She will make several television appearances and speak to aviation groups such as the Wings Club in New York.

The first thing everyone wants to know, she said, is what she wears in the cockpit. The answer is pants. She was given her choice of either a skirt or slacks with the airline's dark blue uniforms, and she chose the latter.

"Skirts in the cockpit," she explained, "are too hard on nylons."

"Oh, I sympathize with women," she said, "but injustice is done to so many people in the world—not just women."

Jayne's Vase Meant For Tiny Flowers

By PENNY SAVER

"There'a a tiger-lily growing in my garden," said Jayne. "At least I think it's a tiger-lily. The leaf looks like it should belong to a tiger-lily."

"Knowing how bright you are about gardening," said Mathilda, "it will probably grow up to be a something quite mundane. Have you ever even seen a tiger-lily?"

"Yes, once, and I found it quite thrilling. I was very young at the time and the bloom was just as tigery as I'd imagined it. By the way, can one pick croci?"

"Not successfully," replied Mathilda as I compared croci and crocuses under my breath, trying to decide which was right.

"They die almost before you get them to water. If you want to take spring flowers indoors, try snowdrops and violets. Buy why do you ask?"

"Because I bought a bowl that is designed for little flowers and croci are the most common little flowers right now."

Jayne's bowl is quite odd looking. All in a creamy shade of white it is clearly designed to look like a Greek marble statue in miniature.

In the centre is a boy playing a flute and at his feet is an area for flowers or greenery. At five points around this bowl there are little spout things just big enough for one little flower spray. The effect empty is odd, but filled I can imagine it would be lovely.

This bowl cost $6.95. Others of the same style range down to $2.50 for a boy-figure sitting on a curved narrow vase only five or so inches in length.

"There were two of these bowls for $3.25 and $3.95 that tricked me at first glance," said Jayne. "The less expensive one, a standing boy with a small bowl at his feet, was set inside the other, a plain ring with just a bit of relief pattern on it, so they looked like one. In fact, bought as one they would cost only a bit more than mine and be much more versatile."

Jayne also told of finding a china music box.

Shaped like a young girl in a fancy, full-skirted dress seated to play a piano (or perhaps a harpsichord by her costume), this music box turns on its base as it plays its little tune.

"The tune is terribly familiar," said Jayne with a frown. "But I couldn't place it to save my life."

"I would assume from past experience with music boxes that the tune is well known — a famous minuet perhaps, but the more I listened, the more befuddled I became. When I tried to remember when I'd heard it last (that's my best memory trick) I kept coming up with a television commercial, which is a terrible condemnation of my cultured standing."

This little china music box costs $7.95.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon if you would like to know where to find these items.

Poverty All-Pervasive In Growth of Child

MONTREAL (CP) — Poverty not only affects the mental, physical and emotional growth of a child but also has consequences in the period before birth, a Carleton University professor says in a report prepared for the Vanier Institute of the Family.

Dr. Thomas J. Ryan, a psychologist, said in the report, to be submitted to the Senate committee on poverty, that pregnant women in lower socio-economic groups often have a poor diet or delay visiting a doctor, thereby increasing the chances of prenatal complications.

Those mothers are more likely to abort or produce a stillborn child than women in more advantageous financial situations.

If the child is born alive, he usually weighs less than a child born to middle or upper-incomes families.

GROWTH ALSO RELATED

Health and physical growth following birth have also been shown to be related to socio-economic status. Dr. Ryan said.

"... at maturity, the average difference in height between high and low socio-economic groups ranges around an average of five per cent of mature height," suggesting that nutrition played a prime role.

"The fact that children from low socio-economic conditions perform poorly on tests of intellectual development is indisputable."

In his recommendations to the Senate committee, Dr. Ryan urges that the federal government become involved in matters pertaining to child development.

Dieters' Desserts Can Be Delicious

Dessert is the Waterloo for many weight-watchers.

Here are four dessert dishes that are both tempting and low in calories. Using fresh fruits, they also have the advantage of adding necessary vitamins and minerals to the diet.

FRESH ORANGE AND APPLE WHEELS

2 sweet red apples, unpeeled cored
⅓ cup water
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tbsp. maple syrup
1 tsp. freshly grated orange peel
2 oranges, peeled

Cut each cored apple into four thick slices; place in large skillet. Pour over a mixture of water, sugar, maple syrup and grated peel. Cover; boil 3 minutes.

Meanwhile, cut each orange into four thick cartwheels. Turn apples; add orange slices and baste with liquid. Cover; boil 1 minute longer. Transfer to glass bowl; chill thoroughly.

For each serving, arrange 2 orange slices and apple slices on individual plates; spoon over a small amount of syrup. Serve very cold. (Makes four servings. Each serving contains 90 calories.)

FRESH ORANGES AND PEARS DESSERT

1 fresh pear, peeled, cored, quartered
½ tsp. freshly grated orange peel
⅓ cup freshly squeezed orange juice
1 tsp. freshly squeezed lemon juice
2 medium oranges, peeled
1 oz. Neufchatel cheese, softened
1½ tsp. sugar
Dash of cinnamon
1 drop green food coloring, optional

Cut peeled pear quarters into halves; place in small saucepan with orange peel and juice and lemon juice.

Quickly bring to a boil; briskly simmer, uncovered for 2 minutes. Baste frequently while pears are cooking. Remove pear slices from liquid; chill thoroughly. Slice peeled oranges into 6 cartwheels each; chill.

Meanwhile, combine softened Neufchatel cheese with remaining ingredients. For each serving, arrange 2 pear slices and 3 orange car wheels on individual plates. Top pears with 1½ tsp. cheese mixture; serve very cold. (Makes four servings. Each serving contains 90 calories.)

ORANGE BANANA BREAD

1 medium orange, unpeeled
1 small banana (6 inches long)
½ cup nonfat milk
1 tbsp. melted butter or margarine
2 cups sifted flour
⅔ cup sugar
2 tsp baking powder
1 tsp. soda
½ tsp. salt
2 egg whites

Trim and discard thin slice from both ends of orange; cut in half lengthwise. With a shallow V shaped cut, remove white centre core. Cut into chunks. Whirl in covered electric blender to yeild ½ cup puree. (Or put through food grinder.) Slice banana into puree mixture; whirl in blender until banana is thoroughly mashed.

In large mixing bowl, stir together milk and melted butter. Sift together dry ingredients; add to milk all at once along with orange and banana puree. Stir until batter is thoroughly blended.

In small mixer bowl, beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Stiir and partially fold beaten whites throughly into batter; do not under-blend.

Pour into greased 9x5x3 inch loaf pan; bake at 325 deg. F. for 55 to 60 minutes, or until done. Let stand in pan 5 minutes before turning out onto wire rack for complete cooling. (Loaf will cut into 22 slices about ¼ inch thick. Each slice contains 75 calories.

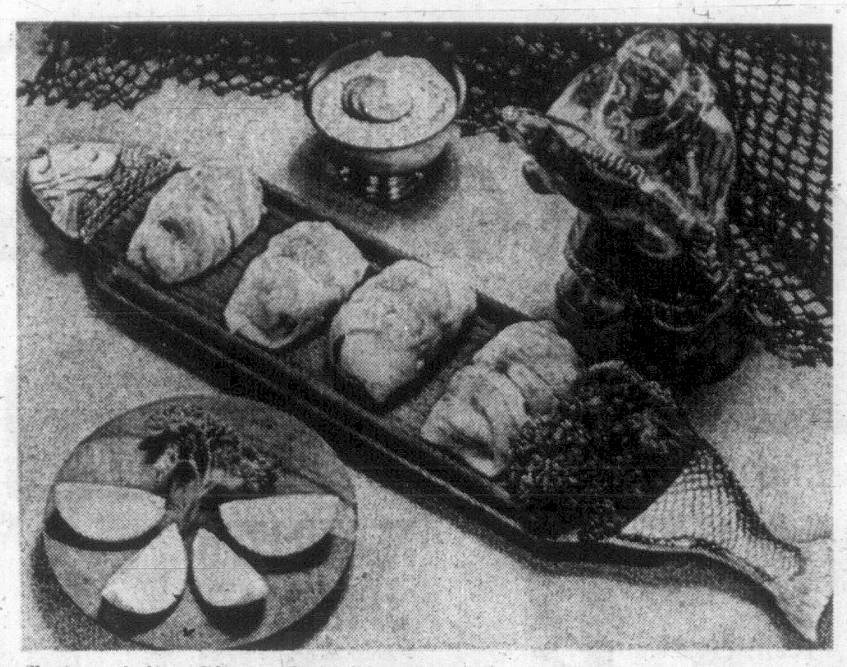
FRESH ORANGE WHIP

1 package (3 oz.) orange flavored gelatin,
1 cup boiling water
¾ cup cold water
1 tsp. freshly grated orange peel
1 tsp. freshly grated lemon peel
1 tsp. freshly squeezed lemon juice
1 egg white (medium egg)
1 tbsp. sugar
1 medium orange, peeled, cut into bite-sized pieces.

Thoroughly dissolve gelatin in boiling water; add cold water, grated peels and lemon juice. Chill until partially set and very thick.

Meanwhile in small mixer bowl, beat egg white to soft peak stage; gradually add sugar and continue beating until stiff, but still shiny and moist. Beat thickened gelatin at high speed in small, deep bowl until foamy and double in volume. Continue beating on medium speed while adding beaten white in 2 or 3 additions. When well blended, fold in orange pieces.

Spoon into 1 quart mold; chill until set before turning out onto serving plate. (Makes eight ½ cup servings. One serving contains 55 calories.)



Short on calories and long on flavor, Salmon Roll-Ups with Cucumber Sauce is a dish that can be served to dieters and non-dieters with a common interest: good food.

Salmon Rolled in Sole Both Slims and Satisfies

Salmon Roll-Ups, a tangy salmon mixture wrapped in sole fillets is one recipe that the dieting cook can make for both herself and the family.

Served with Cucumber Sauce it becomes both fish and vegetable dish in one, and even though one serving contains only 180 calories, it is delicious enough to please everyone.

SALMON ROLL-UPS WITH CUCUMBER SAUCE

4 thin fillets of sole, or other thin fillets, (about 2¾ ounces each and 9 inches long)
Salt and paprika
2 tsp. capers
2 tsp. chopped pimento
1 Tbsp. finely chopped onion
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. freshly grated lemon peel
1 Tbsp. plus 1 tsp. freshly squeezed lemon juice
1 can (7¾-oz.) salmon, drained and flaked.
Cucumber sauce (see below)

Season fillets on both sides with salt and paprika. Dot each with ½ tsp. capers and chopped pimiento. Combine onions, salt, lemon peel and juice; let stand 5 minutes, then mix with flaked salmon.

Mound 3 Tbsp. of the mixture on each fillet; do not extend too far towards the ends. Roll up, jelly roll style; secure with wooden pick. Place in shallow baking dish; cover with lid or aluminum foil.

Bake at 400 degrees F. for 10 minutes; uncover and bake 15 minutes longer. Top each serving with 1 or 1½ Tbsp. Cucumber Sauce.

CUCUMBER SAUCE

1 large cucumber, peeled
¼ cup imitation sour cream or dairy sour cream
1 to 3 tsp. finely minced onion
¼ to ½ tsp. salt.
½ tsp. freshly grated lemon peel
1½ tsp. freshly squeezed lemon juice
3 Tbsp. finely snipped fresh parsley.

Cut peeled cucumber in half lengthwise; with tip of teaspoon, scoop out seeds. Grate seeded cucumbers and drain thoroughly to yield ½ cup. Combine with remaining ingredients; chill before serving. Makes ⅔ cup.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Force Won't Work

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have a 20-year-old son in college who has been everything a son should be. He is an adopted child, but we feel that he is superior to any natural child we might have had. I really mean this.

Last summer he met a 19-year-old girl (also a student), and they are now living together in an apartment. They told the landlady they are married, which they are not.

He says "a little scrap of paper is meaningless." He appears to feel no shame or guilt. We've never met the girl, and don't care to. A girl who would live like this is not our cup of tea. Her parents are divorced, and her mother knows she is living with our son and seems to encourage it.

Although she is on the pill, I'm afraid she might conveniently "forget" one day, and our son will have to marry her.

There are several things we could do to force them to quit living together, but we don't want to hurt our son's future.

We've talked briefly to a psychiatrist, also to the dean of the college, but no one can advise us. Can you? No Name, Please.

DEAR NO NAME: If you think you could force your son to quit living with this girl by withholding financial help, but don't want to "hurt his future," it may not work. You might "inconvenience" him, but some young men make it without money from home, and yours might. As for the girl tricking your son into marriage by "conveniently forgetting" to take her pill — they don't have to live together for this to become a possibility, you know.

There is no way you can force your son to live according to your rules, but tell him that if he doesn't marry this girl, living with her could do him much harm when his reputation comes under scrutiny by future employers.

Personal life styles often reveal a good deal about an individual's stability, common sense, loyalty, and judgment — all important to an employer who is on the hunt for good men.

DEAR ABBY: I just must tell you what Johnny, my little 8-year-old grandson said to me this morning while he was dressing. He said, "Nan, I can't wear this shirt. It itches!" And then he added, "Why don't we write to DEAR ABBY and ask her what to do?"

It seems that just about everything that boy wears "itches" him. But wasn't that a cute thing he said? Mrs. J. Jersey City.

DEAR MRS. O.: Thank you for sharing the "cute" remark your grandson made, but it was more than "cute" — it was a cry for help. Johnny is "itching" to tell you that he is allergic. So better get him to an allergy specialist without delay.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old girl with a problem. Last year a boy in my class got me interested in football. Ever since then I have wanted to be a quarterback for the Green Bay Packers.

Dolls don't interest me. I would rather sleep with my football. My second choice is to be a veterinarian. I still have my heart set on being a quarterback with the Green Bay Packers, My Dad says I will grow out of it. What do you think? Tomboy.

DEAR TOMBOY: Yes, you'll grow out of it. Although the Packers didn't have a very good year, their backfield is still no place for an 11-year-old girl-type quarterback.

HOSPITAL WOULD LIKE A DOZEN MORE

A CYC Worker Who Will Be Missed

By LILLIAN NEWBERRY

TORONTO (CP) — Most of the people Maggi Redmonds worked with had never heard of the Company of Young Canadians.

For 27 months—at a salary of $35 plus $185 a month living expenses—she was a CYC volunteer at the Ontario psychiatric hospital, 999 Queen St. West. Dr. Paul Patterson, resident in psychiatry, says the hospital could use a dozen more like her.

"Just to watch her work is an education. She's so involved, yet she maintains the necessary detachment."

Wearing a navy shirt, plaid miniskirt and necklace of paper clips, Maggi munched lunch in her office a few days before she left the project, while filling out admission papers for a tense 16-year-old called Sharon (a pseudonym).

Sharon had been on and off speed — amphetamines — for three months. She ran away from home, was arrested for vagrancy and sent to the hospital for up to 60 days.

Sharon's father sat stiffly in Maggi's office, not saying much. Sharon slouched in her chair, jiggling a foot.

GRIN IS INFECTIOUS

Maggi, 22, has an infectious grin that makes you forget the snowstorm outside.

"How long since you've shot speed, Sharon?"

"Three days, I guess."

"Need any downers (counteracting medication)?"

"No, I'm down enough now."

"Yeah, you look okay to me. Now you've got a choice, either wear your own clothes on the ward or pyjamas. You're not planning on leaving are you?"

Sharon shook her head and jiggled a foot.

Then Maggi arranged for her to join a therapy group. The groups—called Domestic Power-Sharing Milieu Therapy—are a new concept in psychiatric hospitals. They were just getting started when Maggi joined the CYC 2½ years ago and began the CYC project at the hospital.

WORKED ON HER OWN

The groups, including new and long-term patients, meet daily to make decisions on all ward matters except medication, and to discuss their attitudes. Maggi was responsible for all the patients in her group.

As well, she spent time in the community centre meeting new patients and deciding whether they needed counselling, day care or admission.

"With Maggi, the supervision is delightfully easy; you just sign the orders," said Dr. Patterson.

She had had no previous training except work in youth groups when she joined the CYC. She wanted to work at her own project and a friend suggested she explore the needs at Queen St.

Last summer she was joined by two new volunteers: Larry Sanders, 20, and Susan Dann, 22, who has also since left.

The volunteers decided that the work inside the hospital in "democratizing" the institution is basically complete now as more and more wards are being run on the group system.

So Larry attached himself to the hospital's community psychiatry project.

He sees his goals as educating people on the outside to think of mental patients as individuals, and co-operating with groups working at preventing mental illness.

Larry is involved with the midtown Sackville area, "a forgotten district" where he is trying to set up a meeting among hospital, agency and community people to discuss mental health needs.

He also meets Friday nights with ex-patients who discuss problems that lead to illness. He's trying to overcome the feeling among ex-patients that the CYC volunteers are authority figures who have all the answers.

Dr. Patterson says the volunteers treat people as people, not as patients or cases. They care where the patients come from and where they go after discharge—many have no community to call home; often families have rejected them.

The CYC also affects the medical staff in a positive way, he says, by prodding doctors not to give up on a patient or a treatment.

N.Z. Forced To Drop Offer

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (CP) — An offer of subsidized immigration to New Zealand for skilled workers from Canada is understood to have been quietly dropped after exchanges between the two governments.

New Zealand in the last couple of years has been losing population through migration—more people have left to settle abroad than have arrived to take up jobs. Traditionally through most of its history the country has gained from migration.

In an effort to reverse the new trend, the government has adopted a number of more vigorous immigration policies. They include offering assisted passages to wider categories of workers and extending fare subsidies to countries not previously drawn on.

Late last year the government announced that the subsidy arrangements would apply to workers from the United States and Canada.

CANADA WAS WORRIED

Newspapers at the time were skeptical whether this provision would attract many people, since salaries in Canada and the United States are higher than in New Zealand and in recent years the flow has tended to be in the reverse direction—a good many young New Zealanders have sought wider opportunities in North America.

There is no evidence that any considerable flow of migrants was attracted, but the offer seems to have aroused some concern in Canada.

The New Zealand government reacted rather sharply a few years ago when some Canadian education authorities, including those in Toronto, made recruiting campaigns in New Zealand for teachers. A good many young teachers were signed up.

Ottawa was not involved in the matter, but representations were made that the recruiting would accentuate an existing serious shortage of teachers in New Zealand. The federal government is said to have lent its good offices to discourage further campaigns and there have been no recruiting drives for teachers since then.

Some newspapers here report that the New Zealand move to extend subsidized immigration to skilled workers from Canada has brought a similar reaction from the Canadian government.

After carefully-worded diplomatic exchanges, the New Zealand government now is reported to have dropped Canada from its assisted immigration plans.

Jury Finds All Three Learys Guilty

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Dr. Timothy Leary, his wife and son were found guilty of charges of possession of marijuana and LSD after a six-man, six-woman jury deliberated for 13 hours.

Leary, 50, a former Harvard lecturer turned LSD guru, was found guilty of possession of marijuana while his wife, Rosemary, 34, and son, John, 20, were convicted of possession of marijuana and LSD.

Superior court Judge Byron K. McMillan set sentencing for March 13. Leary and his wife were allowed to remain free on bail but the judge ordered the son's bail revoked and he was taken into custody.

It was the second narcotics conviction for Leary in less than a month.

Damage Limit Bill Said 'Fist Fight' Coverage

By BRUCE YEMEN

People may be "terribly upset" if they have car accidents under a proposed B.C. law that would eliminate the right to sue for property damage in excess of $250, an insurance industry official said Tuesday.

Carl Wilcken, actuary for the Insurance Bureau of Canada, said he had heard the B.C. proposal described as "fist fight or tire iron" coverage.

He made clear he was expressing his own view and not that of the industry which is divided on the question of whether the law suit limit should be put into effect. It was passed by the B.C. legislature last year but was withheld from the proclamation of the act Jan. 1 for further legislative study.

SAVINGS OFFSET

The prohibition of law suits in excess of $250 was described by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson last year as a means of cutting liability insurance premiums and encouraging drivers to drive more safely because they would be responsible for damage to their own cars above $250.

But critics pointed out that the savings in liability premiums would be offset by the necessity for taking out expensive collision coverage as a means of self-protection. Some drivers might not bother to buy it.

In an accident in which fault was in doubt, the collection of damages under $250 could also be difficult for drivers.

Committee chairman Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) had asked if the limitation would cause more disagreement among drivers who realized after an accident they might not recover substantial damages to their vehicles.

Wilcken agreed strife could arise and "they wouldn't have to wear leather jackets or be drunk to get terribly upset."

He said collision rates would "have to go up" if there were a maximum of $250 recoverable by law suits.

MALINGERERS

On another topic, Wilcken said the insurance industry is concerned that "malingerers" will inflate the cost of B.C.'s compulsory no-fault accident benefits scheme now in effect.

He said the weekly benefit of $50 available to housewives, for instance, is a factor that makes it difficult to estimate how much the scheme will cost.

Wilcken, who conducted estimate of $22 for the accident benefits coverage per motorist, told the committee that the Saskatchewan government insurance plan pays disabled housewives $25 a week compared to B.C.'s $50.

There is danger that injured housewives in B.C. will take advantage of the incentive to remain disabled for a longer period, he suggested.

He disagreed with Capozzi that the Insurance Bureau research had "maximized" the 13-week estimate on average period of weekly benefit for injured persons.

But he said the industry would be considerably less concerned about malingerers if the payment were $25 instead of $50.

Fifteen Seeking Leadership of NDP

LEWIS

FISHER

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party will pick a successor to leader T. C. Douglas at an Ottawa convention April 21-24, 1971, a party spokesman said Tuesday.

The leadership convention will be in the Civic Centre where the Liberals picked Pierre Elliott Trudeau in April, 1968.

There are some 15 potential but unannounced candidates for the leadership. The favorite at the moment is generally acknowledged to be David Lewis, deputy party leader.

However, Lewis is 60 and the party is expected to be looking for a younger man.

Douglas has said he will not come out in favor of any candidate as his successor but it is believed he is opposed to Lewis.

Douglas Fisher, the newspaper columnist and former MP, may be in the running despite the setback he suffered in Manitoba last weekend when he ran third for the NDP nomination for a byelection in the federal riding of Selkirk.

Informants say all potential candidates are breathing easier after the Selkirk nomination, won by Doug Rowland, executive assistant to Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer whose move to provincial politics created the vacancy.

The candidates feared Fisher might run away with the leadership before they could even declare themselves.

The convention date would appear to reduce chances of Schreyer himself being a candidate.

It is considered unlikely that Schreyer would be a candidate unless he won a majority election in Manitoba. And an election is not expected in this Manitoba centennial year or in 1971 before the leadership convention.

McGill professor Charles Taylor may enter the race, especially if he could win a Commons seat before the convention.

Decisions by some potential candidates whether to run will depend to a large extent on whether there are provincial elections in Ontario and Saskatchewan. This applies particularly to John Harney in Ontario and Al Blakeney in Saskatchewan.

Possible contestants among MPs besides Lewis include Frank Howard, member for Skeena, Max Saltsman, member for Waterloo and, up to now at least, a Fisher supporter, and Ed Broadbent, member for Oshawa-Whitby.

Other possible candidates include Walter Pitman of Peterborough, Allan O'Brien of Halifax, Stephen Lewis of Toronto, Laurier Lapierre of Montreal and Cy Gonick of Winnipeg.

Quintuplets Attributed To New Fertility Drug

NEW YORK (AP) — Quintuplets—three girls and two boys—were born Tuesday night at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Centre to a 27-year-old New Jersey woman who had been taking fertility drugs.

Arsene Eglis, a hospital spokesman, said the five infants were born six weeks prematurely to Margaret Kienast of Far Hills, N.J. He said the delivery was normal and all five were "doing as well as could be expected."

Mrs. Kienast and her husband, William, a salesman, have two other children, a four-year-old girl and an 18-months-old boy. The spokesman said both of the older children were born after Mrs. Kienast had taken fertility shots.

The quintuplets were born within a 10-minute span from 10:08 to 10:18 p.m.

The first was a girl weighing three pounds four ounces; at 10:09 another girl weighing three pounds 12 ounces arrived. The first boy was born at 10:13 weighing four pounds six ounces. The third girl came three minutes later weighing three pounds 14 ounces and the second boy, at 10:18, weighed three pounds eight ounces.

MOVED TO NURSERY

The quints were moved immediately to the premature nursery at nearby Babies Hospital.

"The father, I understand, is in a bit of shock," the hospital spokesman said.

At the home of his wife's parents, Kienast commented:

"You wouldn't happen to have five new names handy would you?

"I can tell you one thing," he added, "we're going to be needing a lot more house pretty soon."

More than 50 cases of quintuplet births have been recorded but in only five cases have all the children survived to maturity.

The most famous were the Dionne quintuplets, born in Callander, Ont., May 28, 1934. Emily Dionne died in 1954.

The surviving quints are the Diligentis of Argentina, born in 1943; the de Prietos of Venezuela and the Fischers of Aberdeen, S.D., both sets born in 1963, and the Mutanguas of Mozambique, born in 1964.

Normal odds on a quintuplet birth are one in 84,934,656, says the American Medical Association. But these figures are being affected by the use of fertility drugs.

China Just a Paper Tiger Trying to Influence Arabs

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG (WP) — Nothing so dramatically illustrates the emptiness of the Chinese Communists' claim to exert influence among Asian and African nations than their inability to play a significant role in the current Middle East crisis.

And this underlines, once again, the extent to which the Chinese threat to the underdeveloped world has been exaggerated beyond all plausible proportions both by Western cold warriors and Peking propagandists themselves.

From the Chinese viewpoint, it is plain the American "imperialists" are backing the Israelis while the "glorious liberation struggle" of the Arab people is being betrayed by the Soviet "revisionist clique."

Within recent weeks, therefor, Peking has intensified its appeals to the Arabs to subscribe to Mao's brinkmanship theory, which holds that the masses have nothing to lose but their lives in a major conflict.

But the Chinese effort to persaude the Arabs to reject the Kremlin and turn to Peking for inspiration has made virtually no headway, except perhaps among a faction of Palestinian commandos.

Indeed, in an unusual letter to Nasser early this month, Premier Chou En-lai seemed almost crude in his attempt to capitalize on the Egyptian president's troubled negotiations for increased Soviet military aid.

Though he did not directly attack the Russians, Chou was almost lachrymose in his assertion that "the Chinese people will forever remain the most reliable friend" of the Arabs.

After a lengthy silence, Nasser replied with a message that might have been copied from a handbook on diplomatic correspondence. "Dear Friend," he wrote to Chou, "please accept my high admiration and gratitude for your stand and support."

In a conversation with this reporter some years ago, the late Mehdi Ben Barka, then a left-wing Afro-Asian activist, explained the prevailing Arab attitude towards Peking in practical terms.

"The Chinese give us rhetoric, but the Russians gave us hard cash, and that's what counts," Ben Barka said.

This has been borne out since then, of course, in the fact that Moscow has poured vast amounts of weapons and economic aid into the Middle East, while the Chinese have offered the Arabs little more than words.

Apart from a $5 million loan that they repaid, for example, the Egyptians have not received a cent of a pledged $80 million Chinese credit. Algeria has drawn only about .6 per cent of a promised $50 million from Peking.

At the moment, for all the protestations of solidarity being sent to them by the Chinese, the Arab leaders know that the aircraft, electronic devices and other sophisticated hardware they need is available in the Soviet Union.

Back in 1958, the Chinese gained much prestige among the Arabs by being the first Communist country to recognize the Algerian provisional regime. The Russians, in contrast, were hesitant to jeopardize their ties with de Gaulle by establishing relations with the Algerian nationalists.

About that time, too, Chou En-lai was scoring a measure of success in the Middle East by stressing Peking's willingness to co-operate with "different ideologies and different social systems."

But by the mid-1960s, as Mao sought to curb the growing trend towards liberalism inside China, the Chinese foreign policy line stiffened until, in a curious way, it resembled John Foster Dulles' belief in the immorality of neutralism.

Among other tough gestures, Peking boycotted an Afro-Asian conference in Algiers in protest against the presence of Indian and Soviet delegates.

The Chinese also criticized Nasser during that period for attending a meeting of nonaligned countries in Belgrade and for permitting a Soviet-sponsored congress of Afro-Asian writers to be held in Cairo.

Peking's present tactic of trying to woo the Arabs is, along with other evidence, an important indication that the Chinese leaders are shifting to a more flexible posture in the wake of Mao's cultural revolution.

Still, just as Mao's turbulent campaign caused incalculable domestic damage to China, so it may take years to repair Peking's image abroad.

Thus their failure in the Middle East, more than ever apparent now, proves beyond doubt that the Chinese are really "paper tigers" whose roar is far worse than their bite.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends for their kind expressions of sympathy during the recent illness and the passing of our dear wife and mother Lillian, who is so sadly missed. Special thanks to Drs. Pritchley and Lockyer and to Rev. R. G. Thompson for their help and understanding. — Geo. Ross and family.

At some time or other the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you, who did so much to help us through this time.—Mrs. D. Russell and family.

We would like to express our thanks to the many friends for their expressions of sympathy during the recent loss of our Mother, Mrs. Euphemia Prewett. — The Family.

I would like to thank all my friends, relatives and neighbors for the kind expressions of sympathy shown to me at the passing of my beloved husband. — Ozelma Lewis.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

Movie to Watch tonight is a humorous look at the disparity between fact and legend in the old west. The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance, it stars James Stewart, John Wayne and Lee Marvin. It's on Channel 8 at 8:30. Channel 6 at midnight.

The Courtship of Eddie's Father 7, Channel 6; 8, Channel 4: "Free is a Four Letter Word." Although this episode doesn't really deal with Eddie, it's a good one. Tom Corbett's (Bill Bixby) lady-boss arrives on the scene full of ultimatums, including firing phographer Norman who rubbed her the wrong way. Tom comes to grips with the lady (Tippy Hedren) and almost loses his job in the bargain.

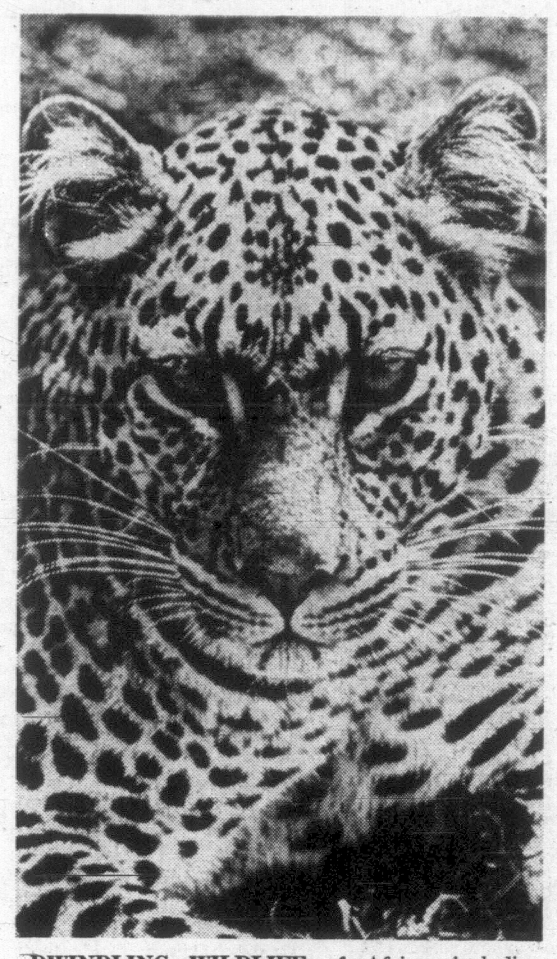
Room 222, 8:30, Channel 4: "I Love You Charlie, I Love You, Abbie." After a couple of weak entries, this fine series is back on the right track again. Two very natural and engaging actors, Brad David (Charlie) and Kathleen Lloyd (Abbie), play a high school couple who confide in Pete Dixon and Miss McIntyre that they plan to elope. The two adults cope with the difficult situation nicely, measuring their fears of keeping the confidence of the kids against being too permissive in advising them.

Johnny Cash Show, 9, Channel 4: It may not be surprising to find Cass Elliot joining Johnny Cash and exploring the country spirit with her host, but it certainly is a ground-breaking area for our world traveler Bob Hope. Bob is there, all right, doing a monologue on the Nashville sound; Cass Elliot sings "New World Coming" and duets with Cash for "Country Pie;" while the rest of the show follows its familiar path including numbers from Johnny's other guests, Kenny Rogers and The First Eidition.

Music Hall. 9, Channel 5. Eddy Arnold hosts the musical hour wondering about life in the 1970s, chatting with his guests, singers Anita Bryant and no-relation Browning Bryant, and introducing "Laugh-In's" Arte Johnson. The latter is responsible for the fun of the hour, playing at being interviewed on the leisure-time advantages of living in a fully automated home, the musical sound of the '70s, and the life style of a 235 year-old man. Vocal highlights include "New World Coming" (Anita), "Today" (Browing), "Blowing In the Wind" (Eddy), plus Arnold's closing concert spot.

Hawaii Five-O. 10, Channel 12. Part I. This series makes absorbing two-parters, and tonight's is no exception. McGarrett tracks a brilliant scientist who discovers the ultimate in biological warfare. The man plans ot kill off the island population with his little bottle, to scare the world into stopping the mad arms race. Action scenes alternate betwen talks by high-level officials which McGarrett listens to, and the scientist's beach meetings with a lonely telephone operator. Suspense builds throughout, and island location footage, especially the beach sequences, are used effectively to cover the talk. 10:00 p.m. CBS.

Medical Centre. 9, Channel 12: Try catching Mercedes McCambridge playing a nurse with all sorts of problems. She's worth it, returning to action after a long absence, playing a character with an artery condition, fearful of going under the knife. The idea of a panicky nurse ducking surgery is effective, thanks to Miss McCambridge's performance, and Doc Gannon scores with his reasonable approach.



DWINDLING WILDLIFE of Africa, including such specimens as this brooding cheetah, is the topic of a special hour-long production tonight at 9:30 on Channels 2 and 6.

Englebert Humperdinck Show. 7:30, Channel 8; 10, Channel 4. Another episode in "The Humperdinck Saga," a satire on the fascinating BBC serial on "The Forsyte Saga," boasts the presence of Nyree Dawn Porter, the magnificent Irene we've been seeing on NET. Not only does Miss Porter participate in the skit, but she sings "When In Rome" and joins Englebert and Milton Berle for "Let's Do It." Other spots on the show include numbers from Oliver, Carmen McRae, Berle and Engel.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

8:30: Channel 8: The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance (1962 western). John Ford, James Stewart, John Wayne.
9:00: Channel 7: To Kill a Mockingbird (1962 drama). Gregory Peck, Rosemary Murphy, Mary Badham and Philip Alford.
11:40: Channel 2: Annie Oakley (1935 western). Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster, Melvyn Douglas.
12:00: Channel 8: Meet Danny Wilson (1951 drama). Frank Sinatra, Shelley Winters.
1:05: Channel 5: Another Part of the Forest (conclusion).
1:30: Channel 13: Convoy (1940 English drama). Clive Brook, Michael Wilding, Stewart Granger.

70s AT '69 PRICES!

Here are a couple of GMC Handi-Vans that must go. Both are long wheelbase models, with heavy-duty axles springs and brakes. One is a 250 six, the other a 307 eight. The six has windows all around, the eight has them in rear and side doors, and both have three-speed automatics and six-ply truck tires.
We are prepared to make an attractive deal on these; why not come in and talk about it?

THE EXTRAS — SPELL QUALITY
$49,400.
Excellent family home in choice high location near University, schools and stores, with views of Mount Tolmie and Mount Douglas. Built in 1968, this house has everything. A kitchen fully equipped with built-in range, stove, dishwasher, garburator, P.A. system to entrance and all rooms, and a spacious nook opening onto sundeck. There are three bathrooms (one five-piece) and a sauna room; a carefully engineered oil-burning hot water central heating system also supplies domestic instant hot water, which can be heated electrically when required.
The house is most attractively styled inside and out, blending its stone facing with the native rock and oak trees, yet providing space for paved patio, fountain, and a home garden—the whole area served by a concealed sprinkler system. The full high basement has a strikingly different family room with fireplace, opening if required into a matching bar; and it is roughed in and plumbed for expansion into a full residential suite.
Quality of materials and workmanship are apparent in all aspects of this excellent home, which is ideal for the active family, or for the busy couple who like to entertain. For an appointment to view please call.

Not too often do we find homes that fit all the qualifications noted above. LOCATION — Not too many sales in this area, people just don't want to leave once they settle in; just south of Craigdarroch Castle. CHARACTER — an older home, updated to modern conveniences. For example you should see the kitchen, smart as today, with lovely breakfast nook. FOUR BEDROOMS — all on the second floor. It would be unfair to the Vendors to allow drive-bys on this one. It's the inside that is so DELIGHTFUL. I am available to supply further details and to set up appointments to view. Please call B. E. JEFFERY, 385-7707 anytime.

RESULTS RELEASED ON GRADE 12 EXAMS

Results of Grade 12 department of education examinations written in January were released Monday and students are expected to have their marks by mid-week.

The January tests, conducted for the first time this year, were designed to assist schools using a semester system in the programming of students. Last September about 45 secondary schools began the school year on the semester system.

Education Minister Brothers said that 4,001 examinations were written in eleven Grade XII examinable courses.

Pair Rescued, Buried 24 Hours

From AP-Reuters

RECKINGEN (CP) — A Paris dentist and his wife, buried under an avalanche for nearly 24 hours, were dug out alive today while rescue teams continued to search for 19 persons missing in Alpine snowslides that hit this Swiss Alpine village and the French town of Lans-le-Villard Tuesday. The slides left at least 23 persons dead.

The French couple were the last two listed as missing in Lans-le-Villard, where an avalanche killed eight persons and injured eight.

Their calls for help were heard by firemen and soldiers working in the wreckage of the Hotel Grand du Signal.

Pneumatic hammers were used to get through the hard packed snow to their second-floor room. The shock of the avalanche had thrown them underneath a bed, which then protected them.

TWO OTHERS FOUND

Earlier in the day, two others listed as missing had been found behind a few planks which they had pushed together to shelter themselves.

The biggest toll was in Reckingen where a huge snowslide roared into the village at dawn and buried 50 persons.

Twenty-one of the victims were pulled from the snow alive, but one died during the night. By dawn today 14 bodies had been found and police said there was virtually no hope for the 15 still buried.

Non-stop snowfalls and shifting temperatures caused slides throughout the Alps. The Swiss resort of Zematt was isolated when an avalanche cut the railway to the valley and helicopters flew out vacationers due to return home. A slide buried 14 skiers in Zermatt, but 10 dug themselves out and the other four were rescued.

Some 16,000 tourists and villagers were snowbound in western Austria after heavy snowfalls and numerous avalanches blocked road and rail communication in the Tyrol and Vorarlberg provinces.

FLIGHTS HINDERED

An emergency relief centre set up by the provincial government in Lans-le-Villard was unable to provide immediate help to many of the isolated winter resorts as adverse weather conditions ruled out helicopter flights to supply food and airlift tourists out of the area.

At Zuers, a snowslide hit part of the Piz Buin Hotel burying Juan Szaszak, 31, and his 24-year-old wife Liliane. While Szaszak himself was rescued after 15 minutes, his wife was dug out more than one hour later.

She was placed in an oxygen tent, in critical condition.

Rescue workers at Reckingen said the snow was like cement and that picks often were ineffective.

Wine Service Seminar Thursday

"Hospitality" will be the theme of the Canadian Restaurant Association's Wine Service Seminar Thursday at the Red Lion Inn.

Also sponsored by the Canadian Wine Institute and the Federal Office of Tourism, the one-day seminar will teach local hotel, club and restaurant operators how to set up a wine cellar, design a wine menu, choose the most suitable types, consider vintages, store, merchandise and serve wines.

They will be shown how to judge color, body and bouquet and then will practise on themselves at a wine-sampling session.

Punishment Changes

ST. GEORGE'S (Reuters) — The Grenada government said Tuesday it will introduce legislation soon calling for flogging by the cat-o'-nine-tails for such offences as larceny, abusive and obscene language and disorderly conduct.

Outdoor Courses Offered

A new batch of spring courses offered by the Saanich Peninsula school board's adult education division are due to begin during the first week of March.

With the onset of milder weather some of the new courses are aimed at adults who want to pursue outdoor activities.

Better Boating, to begin March 2, is recommended by the B.C. Safety Council. Instructor is Clint Clive of the Saanich Peninsula Power Squadron.

Other outdoor courses are golf lessons and Saturday morning sailing lessons.

Back in the classroom these activities will be offered: bonsai, flower arranging, pattern drafting, easy sewing, woodcarving and sculpture, defensive driving and driver education and training.

Adult education director Frank Baxter reports a record enrolment of 1,025 since September in the district's 65 courses.

Enrolment for January and February was 284 in 17 classes.

Science Commitment Needed—Chemist

Scientists can no longer live in ivory-tower isolation, Dr. Norman Grace, national president of the Chemical Institute of Canada, said Tuesday.

"It is time to commit our best brains where they are most needed," Dr. Grace told the Institute's Vancouver Island section in his annual address to 40 members of the group at Royal Roads.

"They are needed to solve the problems of the people as never before."

Dr. Grace said SCITEC, a national organization of Canadian scientists, engineers and technologists recently formed by professional societies, is now prepared to advise government on science policy in the national interest.

"It will also explain science and technology to the general public. The problems to be faced today are too complex and involve too many disciplines to be dealt with in traditional ways," Dr. Grace said.

School Work Approved

"We did our homework and we did it fast."

Sooke school superintendent E. E. Hyndman was referring to efforts by the school board administration to get plans and working drawings for additions to several schools approved following a referendum early last year.

The work has resulted in two approvals by the provincial government treasury board announced Tuesday.

Elizabeth Fisher Junior Secondary will get a power mechanics room, two art rooms, three commercial rooms, and a library-classroom valued at $227,000.

Saseenos Elementary will get two open area classrooms to cost $40,000.

Hyndman said approval on two more schools is expected within a few days. Millstream elementary is to get three new classrooms estimated to cost $84,000, and West Coast elementary is to get three classrooms and a library to cost $100,000.

District ratepayers approved a $2,000,000 building program last year. Expenditures totalling more than $500,000 have been approved so far.

Tenders have been called on the $150,000 Port Renfrew elementary which is due to open next September.

Tips on Growing Dwarf Dahlias

By HILDA BEASTALL

A versatile plant to grow from seed is the dwarf dahlia. It will make a bed of gay color on 18-inch stems outside a low picture window; it is suited to large patio or balcony tubs or to low divider-planters around a relaxation area. Perhaps you think of dahlias as six-foot plants tipped with solid globes 10 inches across. These are the big fellows for large gardens and the fall show tables.

Hilda

Dwarf dahlias grown from seed sown in late February are delightful. They are miniature, either singles or doubles, just about 18 inches tall when grown in full sun, with blossoms three to four inches across.

The amazing thing about these dwarf dahlias is that they begin to bloom before the end of May from a late February sowing made indoors.

The seed germinates readily with a little warmth, and from then on the seedlings need a good light and airy conditions.

To prevent spindling, prick out the seedlings just as the centre shows signs of true leaves forming; at this stage the roots will still be fibrous and easily transplanted.

I find that three-inch spacing is needed in a flat filled level with screened compost and a little sand. This gives room for the amazing development of tubers, so typical to all dahlias.

By the time early morning frosts are no longer a threat, usually after mid-May here, these tubers are well developed. With the three-inch spacing, each plant can be removed from the flat complete with its own block of soil.

At transplanting time in May, these dwarfs should be four to five inches high, showing flower buds and the beginnings of branches at the leaf axils.

Several strains are available locally: Coltness Hybrids are single, either separate colors or in mixture. Unwin's Bedding gives doubles and semi-doubles in a mixture of white, pink, yellow, red and lilac.

For a specially rich effect there is Fall Festival with dark maroon leaves and, if my memory serves, me, single rich red flowers the color of Lobelia cardinalis blooms.

When using a color mixture of dahlia seeds, or any other flower for that matter, be sure to prick out all the seedlings.

If any small seedlings are discarded you will likely find the best colors missing from your color scheme.

Quite often the last seeds to germinate from a color mixture will be different colors to the first that came through, therefore remove only those ready for transplanting and keep the seed container watered for several more days.

Storing the tubers over winter and replanting next year will give the same color effects but on much larger plants.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

All veteran bridge players will agree that during the past two decades, the theory of bridge bidding has progressed rapidly, while the theory of play has remained virtually unchanged. The reason for this is that impractical bidding systems have fallen by the wayside as more practical systems have replaced them. In the play of the cards, on the other hand, what was correct 20 and 30 years ago has been demonstrated as being just as correct today.

Nevertheless, numerous new gadgets relating to play have come into being. In the deal presented today, one of them is featured.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

Opening lead: Five of ♣

When this deal arose some 30 years ago, West's opening lead of a low club was captured by South's 10-spot. South perceived that he had only eight tricks; and that if East obtained the lead, a club return by him might well result in South's defeat (from the play to trick one, West was known to have a club suit headed by the A-Q.)

At trick two, declarer laid down his ace of diamonds, West following suit with the deuce. At trick three, South played his king of hearts. East, not knowing the exact club set-up, and being unwilling to allow dummy's queen of hearts to become an entry for the cashing of the board's diamonds, declined to win the trick with his ace. Declarer now scampered home with nine tricks.

Had the deal come up in modern times, declarer would not have gotten away with his attempt to convince East that South had just the singleton ace of diamonds. On South's lead of the diamond ace, West would have played the eight-spot, initiating a high-low signal, and informing East that West held either two or four diamonds.

East would now have known that South had either one or two diamonds remaining (two, if West's eight-spot were a singleton). He would then have captured the king of hearts with the ace. A club return would now have enabled West to cash four club tricks.

Steve thought a moment. "There'll be a third of them, and also a third of a pear for your Mom," he told the boy. "A third of what's left, and then a third of a pear for me. That should leave three for you."

Experts Refute Dangers of Pill

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

I imagine that the recent excitement about the supposed dangers of the contraceptive pill must have greatly worried many women, but I find from much reading that a number of experts in this field are not so worried. It is true that some women who are using the pill get inflammation of a vein. But this means nothing unless we know how often 10,000 persons, not on the pill, get an inflamed vein. For instance, in the past 15 years I have had four spells of inflamed veins, and my wife has had one spell, and neither of us was taking the pill.

I was not happy seeing a group of laymen in Washington trying to decide about the dangers of the pill, when actually this is a problem not only for physicians but for physicians who are well trained in statistics. With all my 65 years in medicine and with two years of study of medical statistics, with the help of that great medical statistician, the late Prof. Raymond Pearl, I would not feel competent enough to tackle the problem.

Also, many physicians feel as I do that what happens to a few small rats which received during their lifetime huge doses of a drug may well have nothing to do with what happened to a woman, many times the size of a rat, who received a tiny daily dose for only some years of her life. Actually, no one knows if what happens to a treated dog or rat or monkey will happen to a similarly treated woman. Recently, it was found that what happened to treated dogs did not happen to treated monkeys. Also, we doctors have abundant evidence to show that many a drug, like aspirin, that is harmless to a hundred thousand women, may make one woman, who is allergic to the chemical, very ill.

Another fact that impresses me is that, as I understand it, the people who so fear the pill fear it largely because it contains estrogen, the female hormone, which for years many physicians though might produce cancer. Most physicians for many years have so feared estrogen that they would never prescribe it for those many menopausal women who greatly needed it.

I have been giving it to hundreds of such women, ever since it was discovered and made available some 30 years ago, and I have never known of a patient in whom it appeared to have produced cancer or inflammation of veins. Back in the early 1940s, I searched through a big library, trying to learn why my brother physicians so feared the hormone. It seemed silly to be so afraid of it when every normal women is full of it from the time she is 14 or so until she is 48 or so.

Eventually I found that what had given rise to the doctors' fear was a report by a researcher that some rats which had been given huge doses of estrogen had developed cancer. Because I was not satisfied that this proved anything, I continued to prescribe estrogen. Some three years ago I was glad to hear that at the big national meeting of gynecologists, the doctors had decided to quit being afraid of giving female hormone.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Indians Provided Own Sauna Baths

By BOB BOWMAN

Canadian history has neglected a number of Indian chiefs whose colorful exploits should be better known. Brant, Crowfoot, Poundmaker, and Big Bear have perhaps been given their share of the limelight, but there are many others whose stories are obscure. One of them is Membertou, the chief of the Micmac tribe, who helped Champlain, Poutrincourt, and de Monts to found Canada's first permanent colony at Port Royal, now Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia. He and his followers were the first Indians to become Christians, and were baptised by Father Fleche on February 25, 1610.

Membertou actually delayed his baptism until June, perhaps because he objected to some of the sentiments of the Lord's prayer, expecially "Give us this day our daily bread". He preferred to say "Give us this day our daily moose meat", or substitute fish or game bird, according to his desires.

When Membertou was baptised, he claimed to be 110 years old. At least he said that he had been serving the Devil for 110 years. He also claimed to have met Jacques Cartier when he came to Canada in 1534.

Evidently he understood how France was governed and the plan of royalty, church, and state. After he was baptised, he called himself "Henry" after King Henry IV, while his wife, and son, and two daughters were named after members of the royal family. Another son was named "Paul" after the pope. It was probably a good thing for the Micmacs that the leaders of France did not know that they were being represented in this way in Canada!

The Micmacs were very progressive Indians, generally kind to each other, and shared their food. If an elderly father or mother lost a son, they were given a boy to adopt as their own, so he could help to look after them. When the Micmacs became ill, they cured themselves by sweating. They dug a hole, lined it with heated stones, covered with branches, and then lay down in the heat until they were perspiring freely. They made their own sauna baths!

THREE-PARTY AGREEMENT ON EXPANSION OF PGE

Bills authorizing the government to purchase up to $35 million of capital stock of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway and increasing the borrowing authority of the PGE by $50 million were approved unanimously in the legislature Tuesday.

Borrowing authority under the PGE Construction Loan Act will be extended to $240 million and the maximum rate at which interest on sinking funds computed would be raised from five to six per cent.

Although the bills were supported in principle by Socreds, NDP and Liberals, the discussion brought a charge from Liberal leader Dr. Patrick McGeer that if B.C. representatives were more reasonable in talks with the federal government, they would get more help.

Other provincial governments of all political stripes are able to get more help, he said.

Ottawa cut off support for construction of the PGE several years ago.

Premier Bennett replied that McGeer was wrong. He pointed out that B.C. had supported premiers Thatcher of Saskatchewan and Bertrand of Quebec in disputes with the federal government.

NDP leader David Barrett supported the premier, saying he "would not stand in this house and see any government blackjacked by Ottawa."

NDP MLAs said they were in favor of the bills because they would help to open the northern parts of B.C. for development.

Barrett suggested the northern areas needed industrial parks and incentives for the creation of permanent jobs. Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) made a plea that funds be spent on a road from Stewart to Cassiar.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) suggested that there would be merit in extending the rail line to the Yukon and perhaps to Fairbanks, Alaska.

Bennett said if the Yukon chose to join B.C. "nothing would make me happier than to extend the PGE to Whitehorse."

The premier said there must be a balance between the equity capital and the bonded debt of the PGE which is "an important motivating force behind the growth" of northern B.C.

48,460 Homes Purchased

A total of 48,460 homes have been purchased with help from the provincial Home Acquisition Grant Fund since April 1, 1967 with a total of $21.6 million in assistance.

Premier Bennett reported in written answers to questions that 3,013 have been aided by second mortgage assistance for a total of $14 million. Only one-fifth of one per cent of mortgages outstanding at Dec. 31 had delinquent payments, he said.

The balance in the Home Acquisition Fund at Dec. 31 was $35.1 million, Bennett said in reply to written questions from Evan Wolfe (SC — Vancouver Centre).

Pay Bill Introduced

Legislation to raise the salaries of the premier, members of the legislative assembly and cabinet ministers was introduced and given first reading in the legislature Tuesday.

The legislation includes a provision that will change the name of the "minister of social welfare" to the "minister of rehabilitation and social improvements." Phil Gaglardi is the present minister.

Government estimates for the coming fiscal year provide for $2,000 increases in salary and expenses for MLAs. The increase will be from $8,000 to $10,000.

Leader of the opposition David Barrett and Speaker William Murray will have their earnings raised $1,500 to $9,000. Deputy speaker Herb Bruch will receive $1,000 more in addition to his increase as an MLA.

Premier Bennett's total earnings will rise from $28,000 in salary and allowances to $33,000, and cabinet ministers will receive increases from $25,000 to $30,000.

Pay hikes for cabinet ministers and the premier, and the change of name of the department come into effect April 1.

Reg Crosier was third with three pints in 20 seconds.

Juvenile Remanded

HOPE (CP) — A 16-year-old juvenile was remanded 30 days for psychiatric examination when he appeared in provincial court here on a charge of non-capital murder. He was charged after Roland Akida Kamimura, 9, strangled after being tied to a tree outside this community.

HYDRO, BUS RATE HIKES

'Now We Will Build Superstructure'

Premier Bennett Tuesday put his stamp of approval on hydro and bus fare increases and added that the Social Credit government will give B.C. residents "the highest and best standard of living in the world."

"We're only at the beginning of the beginning," Bennett said in an old-style but halting attack on the opposition and reaffirmation of his government's "confindence."

SECOND READING

"We've got the structure built and now we're going to build the superstructure . . . the Social Credit government will give the people of B.C. the highest and best standard of living in the whole world."

His remarks wound up debate on a second reading of a bill to boost B.C. Hydro's borrowing authority from its current $1 billion to $1.250 billion.

All parties supported the bill but only after Opposition Leader Barrett suggested Bennett had lost his "nerve" and was devoid of new ideas for B.C. in the 1970s.

LOST THEIR NERVE

Opposition MLAs also warned that Hydro is getting too big a share of capital funds in B.C. at the expense of schools and hospitals, but all agreed that Hydro must expand to meet the power needs of the next few years.

Barrett compared the Socred government to the Coalition government which won a strong election victory in 1949 and crumbled in 1952 "because they lost their nerve."

He asked Bennett if he would "provide us with the faith, the vigor and the drive" to meet the new challenges.

"We have not seen the depth and quality of drive behind the premier that would give us that kind of confidence," Barrett said.

In his reply Bennett worked up to a peak, shouting:

"The premier of the province and the Social Credit government and movement have not lost courage, they have not lost confidence, they have not lost faith."

NOT A DEBT

Bennett then attacked the opposition as totally incapable of understanding financial matters because the guaranteed indirect debt of more than $2 billion had been described as "dead weight" debt.

It's only debt if the agencies borrowing the money default on their loans, and the province has to pay, he said.

Asked what purposes the $250 million would be used for, Bennett listed a number of projects that are being pushed, including building of new transmission lines, machining the Mica Dam on the Columbia River, completing the Peace River project and a proposed nuclear power plant on Vancouver Island.

Bennett said the government is accepting Hydro's proposed 15 per cent average electricity rate increases and 25 per cent bus fare increases.

Bennett rejected opposition claims that the "little people" would bear the brunt of Hydro rate increases.

EQUAL TO OTHERS

Users of 100 kilowatt hours of power a month pay less in B.C. than those in Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba, he said.

Transit fares at 25 cents for adults will be equal to or less than those of other major Canadian cities, he said, adding that B.C. Hydro bus drivers are the best paid in Canada.

Industrial electricty rates were increased 10 per cent last May and will go up again, Bennett said.

Bennett drew howls of laughter from the opposition when he noted that the Canadian dollar is worth 28 per cent less than in 1961 and on that basis the increases in Hydro rates this year will amount to a 21 per cent reduction in actual cost compared with 1961 when the government took over the B.C. Electric Co.

"You've got a better story than that, surely," Strachan called out.

Bennett rejected opposition arguments that the five cent bus fare increase would discourage people from leaving their cars at home and taking the bus to work.

"It already costs a dollar more to take a car downtown than to take a bus, so if a dollar won't stop them a nickel sure won't," Bennett said.

Anti-Biotic Ban 'Could Hurt Us'

Canada will be in a serious position if Britain decides to ban importing food products from countries that use certain antibiotics in the raising of farm animals, Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) warned Tuesday.

Wallace, who was speaking on the estimates of the department of agriculture in the legislature, said that a study had been undertaken in Britain following the death of children in Scotland from food poisoning. Evidence suggested that the use of antibiotics during the raising of food animals had produced a strain of bacteria resistant to the drugs.

Antibiotics are used in agriculture to produce greater weight in animals with the use of less food.

The main body of antibiotics are outlawed in Britain in animals such as pigs and chickens, Wallace said, adding that he would not like to see Britain decide to ban food from Canada.

He said the situation is serious enough to warrant an investigation, with the banning of use of antibiotics if markets and health are threatened.

However, the MLA pointed out that feed would cost Britons an extra $26 million, and meat and eggs $100 million more if all recommendations of the study were accepted.

CLOSE WATCH

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Food and Drug Administration officials of the federal government are keeping close tabs on the problem.

A big concern for most MLAs during discussion of the estimates was the use of arable land for other than agricultural purposes.

Dennis Cocke (NDP — New Westminster) said that two per cent of the province is good agricultural land and some thought must be given to protection of it in future.

NEED MORE LAND

Liberal Leader Dr. Patrick McGeer suggested that the government must try to ensure that there is as much agricultural land in use 100 years from today as there is now.

Several MLAs suggested that land in the lower mainland and around cities must be preserved for agricultural purposes, and opposition leader Dave Barrett said that the building of residences on good farm land should be outlawed.

William Hartley (NDP — Yale-Lillooet) urged the government to establish corridors for transportation, communication and power lines to save land.

RATES 'EXORBITANT'

Some members called for reductions in insurance and farm machinery costs to farmers. Barrett said that insurance rates on trucks and equipment were "exorbitant," and found some agreement from Shelford.

The high insurance costs for farmers crossing the raod was "ridiculous to say the least," Shelford commented. He suggested that farmers should submit a brief to the special committee on insurance.

Gov't Report Indicts Auto Industry

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Federal Trade Commission, charging the automobile industry with "failing to meet its obligation to provide the public with defect-freed cars," has told Congress the industry should be regulated by the federal government in the same way as a public utility.

The commission proposed Congress enact a "new and comprehensive automobile quality control act," under which the government would set minimum standards of "quality, durability, and performance for new automobiles and all parts thereof."

In a 128-page report, issued last week, the FTC states that "the present situation is that quality control of automobiles is unsatisfactory, the warranty coverage putatively provided by manufacturers is inadequate, and the industry response to the problem insufficient to protect the public.

"Because of this the commission believes the time has come for warranty and quality control standards in this industry to be established by the public, through governmental action, rather than by automobile manufactureres."

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.), who heads the Senate Commerce Committee, said he will ask the commission to "embody its recommendations in draft legislation which I will introduce."

Magnuson, who has proposed legislation only dealing with warranties, said the findings by the FTC "amount to a drastic indictment of the automobile industry. . . ."

THE HOTTER THE FASTER IT FREEZES

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. George S. Kell, 39, a chemist with the National Research Council of Canada, has proven that very hot water freezes about 10 per cent faster when exposed to 20 degrees Fahrenheit than an equal volume of water which is at room temperature when first exposed to the cold. Water at 73 degrees Fahrenheit takes the longest to freze, NRC announced.

War Declared On Tax Paper

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government intends to oppose the federal White Paper on Taxation "with everything at our disposal," provincial treasurer D. G. Steuart said Tuesday.

"We must do this because the theme, the philosophy behind much of the white paper will be harmful, even disastrous, to the future of Western Canada and Saskatchewan in particular," he told a service club meeting.

He said the white paper claims the prime concern of a tax structure should be equity.

"I think the first concern of any government's tax policy should be the development of the nation's resources, natural and human, so that we can provide a higher standard of living for all our people and at the same time be as fair and equitable as possible."

He also said the white paper's implication that all money or wealth earned or acquired is the same and that is should be taxed the same is wrong.

A small businessman earning $25,000 a year in his business is not the same as an executive or a civil servant earning $25,000 a year, he said, and should not necessarily be taxed the same.

Newspaper Banned

WINNIPEG (CP) — Youthbeat, a student newspaper, has been banned from high schools in St. James-Assiniboia for using "offensive language" and printing articles not in keeping with "moral values of our society."

R. A. MacIntosh, superintendent of schools in the Greater Winnipeg city, announced the ban in a prepared statement. The action had been taken Feb. 10 at a meeting of the school board.

Youthbeat publisher Brian Gory said in an interview that the ban was imposed against the newspaper because he used a four-letter word in an article and published a letter to the editor from a student who said pre-marital sex was "right for her."

Challenge Planned

CALGARY (CP) — Two Calgary public school board officials will challenge five parts of the Alberta government's newest school act draft next week when the legislature holds a public hearing on the proposed bill.

Trustees Tuesday appointed chairman G. M. Burden and superintendent Dr. Robert Warren to raise question about the fourth draft after learning the five provisions could restrict board powers and hamper school board efficiency.

Dr. Warren suggested the board's prime concern should be attached to a new section requiring board to hire as teachers only those people who have Alberta teaching certificates.

Some Snow In Alberta

Alberta's warm, sunny weather ended today as a weather disturbance moved rapidly across the province. There was some snow in the cool air covering the northeast corner and a few rainshowers in other sections.

Skies cleared quickly behind the disturbance but a similar band of weather is expected to move across the regions Thursday. Following this a slow cooling trend is expected as changing upper level winds drive Arctic air from the north.

There was little temperature change in Manitoba today although snowflurries are expected this evening and overnight. High today around Winnipeg was 20 and 10 is the forecast low for tonight.

New Grain Rules Would Speed Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — New grain-delivery rules for Western Canada, prompted by slow demand for record-sized wheat surpluses, have been proposed in a government-sponsored special report.

They are designed to make the marketing system more sensitive to demand for a broad range of grains and thereby speed up payments to hard-pressed farmers.

The report was tabled in the Commons Tuesday by Otto Lang, minister without portfolio responsible for the Canadian wheat board. The board is the federal marketing agency handling farm deliveries of most prairie-grown grains plus those from parts of British Columbia.

Separate quotas for major grains are proposed. Farmers under the regulations of the wheat board have been governed by a complex system of delivery quotas set on the basis of how much grain has been exported.

In good years, wheat quotas have been high and occasionally lifted entirely.

Now, when sales have dwindled due to International surpluses, farmers have been limited to delivery quotas so low income has been curtailed sharply.

WOULD FREE BOARD

Under the proposed changes, the wheat board would have a freer hand in setting delivery quotas to meet sales opportunities.

That would apply to various types of wheat from the most common hard spring type to durum, in demand for spaghetti-type products. It would apply also to oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and rapeseed.

The special report was prepared by a committee named Jan. 21 and made up of vice-president E. A. Boden of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, general manager W. G. Winslow of United Grain Growers Ltd., and J. L. Leibfried, executive assistant to the Canadian wheat board.

Mr. Lang said he expects to announce shortly "any special provisions with respect to deliveries in 1970-71 which may be required to deal with the current unusual surplus position in wheat."

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported last Friday that Canada's wheat exports for the first four months of the current crop year, begun last Aug. 1, were the lowest in 14 years at 82,700,000 bushels.

At the same time, Canada's wheat stocks Dec. 1 were an unprecedented 1,286,400,000 bushels.

SAYS PROSPECTS GROW

Mr. Lang has said prospects for sales are somewhat brighter and a Soviet trade mission here this week will be pressed to make further purchases.

The report proposes stiffer penalties for farmer deliveries contrary to wheat board regulations. Board prosecutions for delivery infrations have increased sharply in recent months.

The report recommends board power to suspend delivery rights for farmers involved in illegal practices, aside from penalties imposed by the courts.

In the Commons, Stanley Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie) complained that the committee represented grain handlers rather than farmers themselves.

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) said the proposed revisions for delivery quotas will work against the smaller grain grower by removing the basic delivery quotas applying across the board for all producers.

ABOUT THAT HOUSING CRISIS. With the south end of the Island filling up so quickly, how about taking a lead from the car industry and building compact models? Or if that isn't what's going on here, then maybe some housing contractor has come up with a couple of giants, hence avoiding a big payroll. Actually, it's inmates from William Head finishing paint and stucco work on a scale-model bungalow; a shop project to add some authenticity to the Lions Club Tom Thumb safety village by the swimming pool in Colwood. Arabs May Halt Airline Sabotage

Result Of World Reaction

Times News Services

Arab guerrilla organizations urgently reviewed today their policy of striking at Israel by attacking civilian aircraft abroad, a review brought on by the growing world-wide campaign to safeguard air travel from sabotage and hijackings.

At the United Nations in New York, Secretary-General Thant planned to hold priority talks with key delegates and his own top aides on the air security issue. He returned to New York Tuesday night after cutting short a visit to Burma.

The United States threw its weight behind calls by Israel, Switzerland and other countries for emergency talks on air security following the crash Saturday of a Swissair jetliner, killing 47 persons, and an explosion aboard an Austrian airliner the same day.

OTTAWA AGREES

In Ottawa, Transport Minister Don Jamieson told the Commons that Canada will take part in any talks initiated by any country to safeguard air travel. Jamieson said there should be a maximum effort to prevent sabotage of aircraft, but it would be extremely difficult to develop effective measures.

In Montreal, meanwhile, a spokesman for Air Canada said that a 48-hour embargo has been placed on all freight destined for Israel.

The spokesman said the embargo, which began earlier Tuesday, includes "unaccompanied luggage."

"The Palestine revolution is against killing civilians

RATE BOOST ENSURES 'BEST FOR PROVINCE'

Effective April 1:

- Bus fares for adults will be 25 cents.
- Domestic power rates will increase an average of 15 per cent.

In accepting the rate boosts, Premier Bennett said he is working to give British Columbia "the highest and best standard of living in the world."

Kidnapped Pair Found Unharmed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The FBI reported today it found unharmed two little sisters kidnapped in Alabama and arrested one of two men charged with abducting them.

John Charles Messick, 22, of Tucson, Ariz., was arrested about 2:30 a.m. at the home of a distant relative in Liberty, Mo., a Kansas City suburb, the FBI said.

With him, the FBI reported, were three-year-old Tina Cain and her two-year-old sister, Tiffany, the daughters of an oil worker from Butler, Ala.

Donald Bradford Lee Jones, 23, also charged in state and federal kidnapping warrants issued Tuesday night in connection with the Monday abduction, was still being sought.

POILE HIRED, CROZIER FIRED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Crozier was fired by the National-Hockey-League bound Vancouver Canucks today for "rank insubordination" and replaced as coach and general manager by Bud Poile, late of the Philadelphia Flyers.

Thomas K. Scallen, Canucks' president, told a news conference the club had planned to retain Crozier as coach and general manager with Poile as "assistant to the president with responsibility for overall supervision."

Pathet Lao Offensive Unchecked

VIENTIANE (CP) — The North Vietnamese-Pathet Lao offensive rolled on unchecked in east-central Laos today as the defenders of Muong Soui and their families straggled back to Gen Vang Pao's headquarters at Long Cheng, 35 miles to the south.

Vang Pao is reported to have planned to reinforce the strategic mile-long airstrip and the town of Muong Soui with a battalion from the 10,000 Meo tribesmen he commands, but changed his mind when enemy ground fire prevented troop-carrying planes from landing at the field.

ABANDON ORDER

Sources in Vientiane said the company of Meo and Lao troops defending the post 15 miles west of the Plaine des Jarres were ordered to abandon it at dusk Tuesday.

The North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao force which began driving westward two weeks ago is reported to number about 20,000 men.

Communist forces in Laos shot down or destroyed 29 U.S. aircraft in the 10 days ending Saturday, the Pathet Lao news agency said today.

THAILAND STIRS

In Bangkok today Premier Thanom Kittakachorn of Thailand said today a column of pro-Communist Pathet Lao troops trying to partition Laos was approaching the Meong River town of Paksane on the border with Thailand and only 40 miles northwest of the Laotian capital of Vientiane.

Thailand had made preparations for defending its border provinces, Thanom also told reporters after Thai leaders met with American Ambassador Leonard Unger.

Official sources in Bangkok said the government placed all the border provinces with Laos on a full alert as North Vietnamese forces were reported to be advancing west toward the Mekong River after their capture of the strategic Plaine des Jarres.

Pompidou Stresses Mid-East

WASHINGTON (UPI)— French President Georges Pompidou told a joint session of Congress today that a Middle East peace settlement must include a renunciation of force by both sides and a solution to the problem of the Arab refugees from Palestine.

He told the senators and house members that France reaffirms "the right of the state of Israel not only to existence but also to security" from its Arab neighbors.

Pompidou made the Middle East situation a highlight of his prepared speech to congress but he also touched on the outlook for the United States in the Vietnam war.

He said that the French government has at times regretted the length of the negotiations and "wondered whether the paths followed had always been the speediest and surest."

"But I know, from having observed it just yesterday, the will to peace which guides the president of the United States," the French leader said.

IN MIND

Pompidou made no specific references to French experiences in fighting in Vietnam and Algiers but he apparently had them in mind as he gave this word of advice to the United States regarding Vietnam.

"I know — because France has experienced it—how difficult it is to end such conflicts and that the stronger a people, the greater the effort required, but also the greater the honor won. Allow me, as a friend, to tell you that the end of the war in Vietnam, for the United States, will be the most precious of victories — a victory won first over oneself."

The French president, who has been assailed in this country for the sale of Mirage jet planes to Libya, said in his discussion of the Middle East that Israel had achieved "undeniable success on the battlefield."

'MISUNDERSTOOD'

He said that the French position has often been "criticized or misunderstood," then added:

"But who can not see the precarious and in the long run sterile nature of the victories gained?

"Who does not understand that there is no assured future for Israel outside a lasting entente with the world which surrounds it — entente which implies renunciation of military conquest and the solution of the Palestinian problem."

NUCLEAR POWER PLANT ON ISLAND

Bennett Seeks Ottawa Aid

B.C. is asking Ottawa for help in a proposal to build a nuclear power generating station on southern Vancouver Island, Premier W. A. C. Bennett said in the legislature Tuesday.

B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said later the $150 million plant, a public proposal of his for some years, might be built in the Duncan area to provide power to Vancouver Island and surplus for the lower mainland. It could be in operation by 1976.

The plant would produce 500,000 kilowatts of power annually.

Ottawa will be asked for low-cost loans to aid in the construction. Similar help has been made available to Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba, Shrum said.

CLOSE TO LINES

The Duncan area would provide a site close to power transmission lines linking Vancouver Island with the Lower mainland.

Shrum said the nuclear plant would produce no danger from wastes and excess heat could be used for fish propagation or greenhouse heating.

Nuclear power appears to be the only solution to the growing need for power on Vancouver Island, where available new power sources are limited, Shrum said.

"The only other source of power left is thermal," Shrum said, pointing out that coal would have to be brought in from the East Kootenays for thermal generating plants. Air pollution would be a hazard, he added.

There is no air pollution from nuclear plants and the byproduct, plutonium, can be sold to other countries using different types of atomic reactors, he said.

There is some doubt B.C. could proceed with a nuclear plant without Ottawa's help, Shrum said, adding that Ottawa wishes to promote sale of its Atomic Energy Commission-developed reactors.

Radiation from the reactor is comparable to the radiation "you would get from a partner sleeping in a double bed," Shrum said, adding "you could safely lean up against the side of one of those reactors for your whole lifetime."

'WARM UP' FISH

Heat from a reactor, which might be a problem in a hot, dry climate such as that in the Interior, could be used to heat greenhouses or warm up cold coastal waters to aid fish propagation, he suggested.

It would take about six years to build a nuclear plant, Shrum said.

Ontario has one 200,000 kilowatt nuclear plant in operation, Shrum said.

Bennett said the official request for aid to Ottawa has not yet been made and that Hydro still has the engineering details under study.

Asked how firm the government is on a nuclear plant at this stage, Bennett replied: "This is the first time I've announced it in the legislature."

COST FAVORABLE

He made his remarks after both Opposition Leader Dave Barrett and Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby Edmonds) had asked whether the government is considering a nuclear power plant.

Dowding said electric power generated by nuclear plants could be produced at a three to four mill cost, comparing favorably with sources such as Peace River power which has to be delivered over long distances.

A little more than half of the power used on Vancouver Island currently is generated on the Island, mostly at the

MIAMI (WP) — The U.S. government and the nuclear power industry Tuesday headed for a showdown in court which has vast implications for the campaign to reclaim the United States environment.

The interior department, in a precedent setting step, threatened to sue the Florida Power and Light Co. to keep it from overheating Biscayne Bay with water discharged from its electricity-making plant at Turkey Point near here.

In doing so, interior served notice that power plants all over the United States are apt to be sued for thermal pollution—the practice of dumping so much heated water into a stream, lake or bay that the aquatic life cannot stand the increase in temperature.

The federal water pollution control administration, an arm of the interior department, charged Tuesday at a conservation hearing that warm water coming from Flordia Power and Light's Turkey Point plant had caused severe damage over an area of 670 acres.

FISH YILLED

Fish and shell fish were killed and plant life diseased as temperatures rose 10 degrees above normal in the bay, the agency reported.

The Florida case is the first time the U.S. government has attacked thermal pollution in a formal action. President Nixon is asking for authority to police all navigable waters, not just interstate ones, in a bill before Congress.

Electric power companies use tons of water everyday for cooling and then return it to the source heated up. The nation's growing demand for electricity will accentuate the thermal pollution problem.

Florida Power and Light attacked the federal report, contending there was no hard evidence that its thermal discharges had hurt marine life.

PRISONERS MAY GET 'LEAVE' IN NEW CORRECTIONS ACT

A bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday night changes the name of provincial jails to "correctional centres" and provides increased freedom for rehabilitation of prisoners.

One section of the bill, the new Corrections Act, would enable certain prisoners be granted leave from a correctional centre, with or without escort, for "medical, educational or humanitarian reasons to assist in the rehabilitation of the inmate."

A limit of 15 days' leave applies for "humanitarian" reasons but educational or medical leave could be unlimited.

Another section would enable prisoners to take "gainful employment for wages" outside the centre for "specified periods" with the money to be used under guidance of the warden for support of the inmates' dependants or to cover costs of his travel, meals, cost of keep at the centre or other expenses.

Attorney-General Peterson, asked if the bill allowed for conjugal visits for prisoners, said it would be up to the discretion of the director of corrections.

Peterson said his department tried to make the act the most modern of its kind anywhere and described it as a consolidation of a number of improvements which have been in progress for some time.

The bill brings the probation, correctional and parole services under one agency, the B.C. Corrections Service.

He said the "greatest" emphasis of the three elements will be on probation.

CARLETON CRITICS CHARGE

Uvic President Choice 'Insult to Canadians'

By BOB MITCHELL

Hiring American administrators to head two B.C. universities was a "distinct insult to Canadians and the Canadian academic community," Carleton University English teacher Robin Matthews said here today.

Matthews, who arrived with colleague James Steele, was referring to appointments of University of Victoria president Dr. Bruce Partridge and Simon Fraser University president Dr. Kenneth Strand.

The two professors from Ottawa's Carleton University have been in the news for the last 18 months since proposing that two-thirds of faculty members at all Canadian universities should be Canadian, by birth or citizenship.

Just under 50 per cent of university teaching positions are now held by Canadians.

Uvic and SFU are the only universities in Canada with non-Canadian presidents.

"I don't think any more American presidents will be appointed," Matthews said, referring to publicity given the work of a committee of academics which was formed to study "de-Canadianization" of campuses.

"In recent years Canadian universities have been accepting American qualifications.

"Life-long experience in Canada was not a qualification.

"President Partridge is one of those men who just shouldn't have been hired."

Matthews said hiring Partridge was an insult to Canadians because the university, in effect, was saying no Canadian was good enough to be president of Uvic.

"When President Partridge was hired I wrote two letters . . . and asked them what the qualifications were they had considered, . . . and the chancellor of the University of Victoria did not deign to reply."

Matthews and Steele both spent their early years in British Columbia. Matthews, a UBC grad, was born at Powell River. Steele, a Trinity College grad, attended elementary school at Ucluelet.

This is the first time they have come to B.C. in their campaign to focus attention on effects of the large proportion of non-Canadians in the universities.

They spoke Tuesday at UBC and were to address students and faculty members at Uvic today.

Steele said one of their aims is to make it mandatory for all university officials from chancellor down to department chairmen to be

TAX TIPS FOR 1970

This column has been prepared by the department of revenue, taxation. Generally applicable answers to common questions are attempted. Where unusual circumstances render the answers inadequate to your needs consult your taxation guide. If you are still in need of help write to P. J. Kelly, public relations officer, National Revenue, Taxation, Victoria district office, for free advice.

Q. I am over 65 years of age and no longer contribute to the Canada Pension Plan. Do I still have to have a Social Insurance Number?

A. Yes. Originally it was required only by those taxpayers making contributions to the Canada Pension Plan but now it is required by all those who file an income tax return. Application forms for social insurance numbers are available from any post office, district taxation office, unemployment insurance office or office of the department of health and welfare.

Q. Do I have to acknowledge bank interest as income when filing my income tax return if they don't send me a T5 slip?

A. Yes, bank interest is income and it is your responsibility to report it whether or not you have received a T5 slip from the bank.

Q. For income tax purposes, are fees to fraternal societies and service clubs deductible? What about union dues? I understand that they are taken as a deduction but that there is only a portion of the dues allowable. How do I know how much I can claim for my union dues and how do I know what is not an allowable deduction?

A. Fees paid to fraternal societies and service clubs are not deductible from employment income. Your union should inform you what you can claim for your union dues by giving you a receipt to file with your imcome tax return.

Q. I am a salesman operating out of my house. I have a room set up as an office. Can I claim any expenses for this "office" when figuring my income tax?

A. If the room is used solely for the purpose of earning your income you may be entitled to deduct a portion of the cost of maintaining your house as a business expense. Unfortunately, more information would be required before you could be advised on how to calculate the amount of your deduction, but your district taxation office will be pleased to help you.

Q. I arrived in Canada in August last year and am told that when filing my income tax return I have to pro-rate my personal exemptions. What does this mean?

A. This is explained in Item 21 of the Guide to the 1969 T1 Short and Item 20 of the 1969 T1 General Tax Guide under the heading Special Rules for Immigrants and Emigrants. Basically, it means that you are allowed to claim exemptions for only that portion of the year you were a resident of Canada. If you were a resident for 200 days, you would be allowed your exemptions multiplied by 200/365.

Q. I am now receiving payments from the Canada Pension Plan. Is this income taxable? If so, do I put it on the tax form as part of my income, or does it have to be entered in a special place on the form?

A. Canada Pension Plan benefits are to be included in income on your income tax return by entering the amount you received from this source in the space marked "Old Age Security Pension and Supplement, and Canada or Quebec Pension Plan benefits."

CLUE: IT DOESN'T COLLECT GARBAGE

CRDB Is Everywhere . . . But, Good God, What Is It?

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Capital Regional District board met this afternoon.

So what?

Local politicians admit, from time to time, that the regional board is little understood by the general public.

Probably the concept and the name are difficult to grasp.

After all, there are seven municipalities, four school boards and several single-purpose boards to serve southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, with a population less than half that of Vancouver city.

The chairman of the regional board, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, once said a priority for board directors is to explain its powers, limitations and structure.

He had heard, for example, that an Oak Bay woman blamed her increased assessment on the regional district. (The district has nothing to do with assessments.) In another case, a Saanich taxpayer thought local parks were under control of the region. (They aren't.)

And another thought was that the regional board will move to amalgamate fire and police services. (Highly unlikely.)

The board is only responsible for area-wide problems assigned to it.

This includes, at this time, regional sewerage and disposal (but not local sewerage construction), regional parks (but not local parks), regional planning (but not local planning and zoning), and control of fireworks.

It also acts as agent for some local services in unorganized areas — the Centennial swimming pool and Colwood racetrack park, for example.

The companion Capital Regional Hospital board is reponsible for local hospital financing and expansion.

What next?

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health is expected to join the growing number of "functions" handled by the multi-purpose regional board. Garbage disposal (but not collection) is expected to follow.

Is the regional district approach the back-door route to amalgamation?

Some argue that the regional approach has made the old issue of amalgamation irrelevant because (at least some) area-wide problems are being or will be tackled on an area-wide basis.

Others say the regional district simply handles the problems that individual municipalities can't or don't want to cope with. And that amalgamation, recently in the news, would be inevitable without it.

Who is on the regional board?

There are 18 directors, representing the municipalities and unorganized areas on southern Vancouver Island and in the Gulf Islands. Representation by directors and votes they have is weighted according to population.

The directors are: Victoria city — Mayor Courtney Haddock, Ald. Percy Frampton, Ald. Cecil Parrott; Saanich — Mayor Hugh Curtis, Ald. Edith Gunning, Ald. Leslie Passmore; Oak Bay — Mayor Frances Elford; Esquimalt — Mayor Arthur Young; Central Saanich — Mayor Archibald Galbraith; North Saanich — Mayor James Cumming; Sidney — Ald. W. W. Gardner; View Royal — Al Beasley; Sooke — Howard Elder; Colwood — Richard Emery; Salt Spring Island — M. H. Holmes; Langford — Earl Pallister, outer Gulf Islands — Joan Purchase; Metchosin — Ken Rainey.

Mayor Curtis in this year's chairman.

Who works for the regional district?

There is an executive director, Bill Long, who has an assistant, John Bericoff. Former Esquimalt municipal engineer Bill Gerry now is the regional district's engineer.

The former Capital Region Planning Board disappeared two months ago and became part of the Capital Regional District, with its planning director Tony Roberts and staff continuing their duties under a new label.

How do you get elected to the regional board?

Most of the directors are appointed by their respective councils. So while the public elects its council members, it does not elect its regional district directors.

Several suggestions have been made in the past for direct election by the public of regional district directors in the municipalities.

In the unorganized areas, because there is no municipality, there is direct election of representatives by the public.

Can you attend regional district meetings?

Yes, they are open and meetings are held on the fourth Wednesday of the month at 2 p.m. at 208 Burnes House, Bastion Square.

One Woman Blamed It For Assessment Hike

'I'm a Poor Little Sheep . . .'

Udderly rejected by the rest of the flock is this lamb, one of two born on the Oldfield Road farm of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hoole this month. The ewe was unable to feed them and other ewes rejected them when they tried to get themselves adopted. The lambs had to settle for Mrs. Hoole as bottle-nurse but they're still trying to get into the flock.

Double Parking Fines Proposed by Mayor

Speaking to the Victoria Real Estate Board Haddock said there was little doubt in his mind that 60 per cent of all overtime parking offenders are repeaters.

"What we are doing is renting them a portion of the street for a dollar," he said. "They just park their cars, feed the meter throughout the day and — if they forget — just simply pay a dollar fine."

The mayor said he felt sure doubling the fine would convince meter-feeders that they should be parked off the street.

An approach to the Downtown Businessmen's Association for an opinion on the proposed fine increase had failed to bring a response the mayor said in an interview.

NO ANSWER

"I asked the downtown people what they thought of my idea but they haven't answered my letter. I was hoping they'd tell me that they'd back the idea of putting the overtime parking fine up to $2."

Later this year the Downtown Businessmen's Association will be pushing for an affirmative vote to clear the way for a new 400-car parking facility on Johnson Street.

In the past the association has asked for action to eliminate the all-day on-street parker in the downtown area.

PETERSON PRESSES QUEBEC

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Tuesday he isn't satisfied with a letter from Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul explaining the beating of a B.C. Civil Servant in Quebec City Feb. 1.

He said he does not want to make details of the explanation public at this time because he wants to give the Quebec minister a chance to provide "further information I will request of him" in the beating of Walter Redel, B.C. lands director, while on government business in Quebec.

Peterson said he would send a telegram to Paul asking for more information.

Redel underwent surgery to treat a cracked bone above one eye which resulted from the beating.

Suspect Jumps Into Harbor

The chase followed a robbery at one of the shops in Bastion Square. Preliminary reports indicated two youths fled after grabbing about $4 from the till in Bonnie's Boutique.

The suspect jumped into the water and swam to the Department of Transport docks near the Johnson Street bridge where he was arrested by officers.

At noon police were still combing the area for the second thief.

Early indication were the pair may have attempted an earlier grab-and-run theft at one of the other shops in the square.

Three burglars early this morning also broke into the Rice Bowl, 2656 Quadra, and stole about $200 from proprietor Don Lim.

Lim was assualted and was forced to hand over the money. They escaped, but police obtained a good description of the men.

MOST IN PROVINCE

City Leads in New Houses

Metropolitan Victoria was the only large centre in the province to show an increase in dwelling starts last month, a marked contrast to the rest of Canada.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. B.C. region reports the entire gain in housing starts for January, compared with January 1969, is attributable to Victoria, which had 170.6 per cent increase.

Vancouver and all other B.C. entres of more than 10,000 population reported declines, as did all other CMHC regions reporting across the country.

In metro Victoria — including six organized areas, Indian reserves and unorganized territory to Langford — there were 525 new housing starts compared with 194 in the first month of 1969. The gain was due entirely to new rental accommodation, CMHC said.

The latter rose by 380.8 per cent from 94 a year ago to 452 units last month. Single family homes dropped 27 per cent from 100 to 73.

CMHC says the Victoria area had 3,744 dwelling starts in 1969 and 2,687 completions, In January 1970 there were 2,472 units under construction in this area compared with 1,246 in the same month a year ago.

B.C. as a whole had 1,505 new housing starts last month, a 19 per cent increase from 1,264 in January 1969. The provincial rate of completions was 84.8 per cent above the same month last year and the inventory of new units under construction was 13,769, up from 10,000 in the month last year.

Vancouver's decline was marginal, from 978 to 950 new housing starts in January, mostly in the homeowner sector, with rental accommodation hardly changed at 658 unit starts against 664 last year.

The rest of the province showed a 67.4 per cent drop from 92 to 30 units in the same period.

Market conditions in the two metropolitan areas appear to be quite different. Victoria showed the highest inventory of completed but unoccupied dwelling units since December of 1966, 33.5 per cent higher than in January 1969.

Completions in the capital were up 135.6 per cent for a total of 271 units and producing an inventory of 435 units.

One-Day Reprieve On Licence Plates

You have until 5 p.m. Saturday to get 1970 licence plates for your car, truck, trailer or motorcycle.

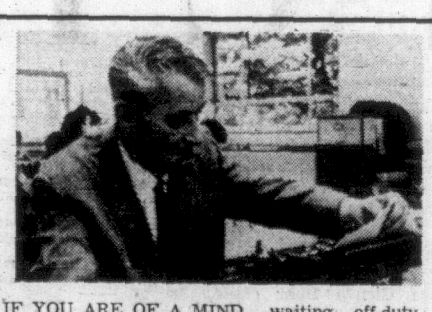
B.C. Motor Vehicles Branch today announced extension of the deadline from 5 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Saturday. The issuing office, behind the Legislative Buildings on Belleville, will open at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Chauffeur licences will also be issued during those hours, but there will be no driver examinations Saturday.

It is expected more than 120,000 licence plates will have been sold by 5 p.m. Saturday — an increase of at least 10 per cent from 1969.

Computer figures show 108,720 licences were issued up to Feb. 19, including 77,274 passenger cars, 16,996 commercial vehicles, 2,140 motorcycles and 12,310 traliers.

The municipal office at Sidney will also open for the issue of licences Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Municipal licences for commercial vehicles will be available at Victoria city hall and Saanich municipal hall from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.



Arthur Mayse . . .

IF YOU ARE OF A MIND to hear a soldier's tale, listen while Second World War veteran Jim Short of 1014 Burdett Avenue recalls a non-meeting with a famed Irishman that landed him in one guardhouse, saved him from another, and brought him a rare souvenir.

Jim Short's person fails to match his name. He is a large, vigorous, mustache-sporting Victorian of 52, very straight in the back and wide in the shoulders. Though his war is a long way behind him, he still retains something of the military look.

We met first on the party fishing vessel Lakewood, where Jim was then helping tourists to bait hooks and untangle gear. But it was only this week that he told me about his message from George Bernard Shaw.

The year was 1940, and Jim a 21-year-old private of our first wave. He had crossed from Canada with Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. In that summer, of training and waiting, off-duty time hung heavy.

One idle hour in holding unit Camp Borden, he came on a newspaper piece about Shaw. It gave the playwright's address — 'Shaw's Corners, Ayot St. Lawrence, Hertfordshire'.

"What we should do," Jim suggested to Princess Pats Private Jack Scholey, "is go pay him a call."

As Jim explains it now, they were young, and not of a mind to let difficulties stand in their way. Also, they had 24 hours to kill. So they took off from Borden in Hampshire, hitchiked into London, and out again along the Great North Road.

The day was well along when they arrived at Shaw's retreat. Disappointment waited them. The great man was sojourning in Whitehall.

But Shaw's housekeeper was kind to the soldiers from Canada. She invited them in and gave them tea, then insisted that they leave a note for her employer.

This Jim did. Then the pair started back to camp, which they figured on reaching with time to spare.

"We got a lift from a corporal," Jim remembers. "He became suspicious because we didn't have our respirators as required. The corporal began to ask uncomfortable questions. When he learned we'd taken off from Borden without a pass, he delivered us to the guardroom at Hatfield Hospital."

Next morning, the two arrived under escort at Borden, to be marched before their company commander. But let Jim tell it.

"He asked what we had to say for ourselves. I got as far as telling him 'We went up to see George Bernard Shaw', then he stopped me with lifted hand.

" 'Hold it!' he said. 'That's a new one. I'm so sick of hearing tired old stories that I'm willing to accept a fresh one at face value. Case explained!' "

Did GBS answer the note? No, not exactly. But Jim and his friend were talking up their attempt a few weeks later — and absorbing heavy kidding — when a postcard arrived from Shaw's Corners.

'Mr. Bernard Shaw engaged in heavy literary tasks . . . resolutely abstains from private correspondence . . .' and so on in the firmest of terms.

However, a hand-written screed small, black and positive, occupied all areas that the formal print left bare.

"In reply to an undated letter just discovered: I am painfully conscious — being a shy sort of man — of my position as one of the sights of this country; and it serves me right if people gaze at me and whisper my hissing name as I pass. But I have too few years to live (perhaps none) to allow even the Canadian contingent, much less the whole British army, more than a passing glance.

"Just count up what it would mean if you all came to tea with me. No more plays, no more prefaces, no more hours off parade all to myself. Spare me.

G. Bernard Shaw."

And in a skinny line across the other end of the card: "Still, your adventures made a good story for me."

Jim let me study this Shavian gesture with its kind touch added for the benefit of a Canadian far from home. Then he said, "He didn't answer the note, you see, but I wrote a letter when we got back. I told him about the night in the guardhouse, and what our company commander said. It must have amused him."

Shaw, despite his predicted few years or perhaps none to live, survived with vinegary stubborness until 1950. Private Jack Scholey of the Princess Pats bought it in Sicily. But Jim Short came home to Victoria with stories to tell, and Shaw's note to back up this one of them.

What's that message and signature worth? He doesn't know, and neither do I. But perhaps some reader can enlighten him.

CLUE: IT DOESN'T COLLECT GARBAGE

CRDB Is Everywhere . . . But Goodness, What Is It?

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Capital Regional District Board met this afternoon.

So what?

Local politicians admit, from time to time, that the regional board is little understood by the general public.

Probably the concept and the name are difficult to grasp.

After all, there are seven municipalities, four school boards and several single-purpose boards to serve southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, with a population less than half that of Vancouver city.

The chairman of the regional board, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, once said a priority for board directors is to explain its powers, limitations and structure.

He had heard, for example, that an Oak Bay woman blamed her increased assessment on the regional district. (The district has nothing to do with assessments.) In another case, a Saanich taxpayer thought local parks were under control of the region. (They aren't.)

And another thought was that the regional board will move to amalgamate fire and police services. (Highly unlikely.)

The board is only responsible for area-wide problems assigned to it.

This includes, at this time, regional sewerage and disposal (but not local sewerage construction), regional parks (but not local parks), regional planning (but not local planning and zoning), and control of fireworks.

It also acts as agent for some local services in unorganized areas — the Centennial swimming pool and Colwood racetrack park, for example.

The companion Capital Regional Hospital Board is reponsible for local hospital financing and expansion.

What next?

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health is expected to join the growing number of "functions" handled by the multi-purpose regional board. Garbage disposal (but not collection) is expected to follow.

Is the regional district approach the back-door route to amalgamation?

Some argue that the regional approach has made the old issue of amalgamation irrelevant because (at least some) area-wide problems are being or will be tackled on an area-wide basis.

Others say the regional district simply handles the problems that individual municipalities can't or don't want to cope with. And that amalgamation, recently in the news, would be inevitable without it.

Who is on the regional board?

There are 18 directors, representing the municipalities and unorganized areas on southern Vancouver Island and in the Gulf Islands. Representation by directors and votes they have is weighted according to population.

The directors are: Victoria city — Mayor Courtney Haddock, Ald. Percy Frampton, Ald. Cecil Parrott; Saanich — Mayor Hugh Curtis, Ald. Edith Gunning, Ald. Leslie Passmore; Oak Bay — Mayor Frances Elford; Esquimalt — Mayor Arthur Young; Central Saanich — Mayor Archibald Galbraith; North Saanich — Mayor James Cumming; Sidney — Ald. W. W. Gardner; View Royal — Al Beasley; Sooke — Howard Elder; Colwood — Richard Emery; Salt Spring Island — M. H. Holmes; Langford — Earl Pallister; outer Gulf Islands — Joan Purchase; Metchosin — Ken Rainey.

Who works for the regional district?

There is an executive director, Bill Long, who has an assistant, John Bericoff. Former Esquimalt municipal engineer Bill Gerry now is the regional district's engineer.

The former Capital Region Planning Board disappeared two months ago and became part of the Capital Regional District, with its planning director Tony Roberts and staff continuing their duties under a new label.

How do you get elected to the regional board?

Most of the directors are appointed by their respective councils. So while the public elects its council members, it does not elect its regional district directors.

Several suggestions have been made in the past for direct election by the public of regional district directors in the municipalities.

In the unorganized areas, because there is no municipality, there is direct election of representatives by the public.

Can you attend regional district meetings?

Yes, they are open and meetings are held on the fourth Wednesday of the month at 2 p.m. at 208 Burnes House, Bastion Square.

'I'm a Poor Little Sheep . . .'

Udderly rejected by the rest of the flock is this lamb, one of two born on the Oldfield Road farm of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hoole this month. The ewe was unable to feed them and other ewes rejected them when they tried to get themselves adopted. The lambs had to settle for Mrs. Hoole as bottle-nurse but they're still trying to get into the flock.

Double Parking Fines Proposed by Mayor

Speaking to the Victoria Real Estate Board Haddock said there was little doubt in his mind that 60 per cent of all overtime parking offenders are repeaters.

"What we are doing is renting them a portion of the street for a dollar," he said. "They just park their cars, feed the meter throughout the day and — if they forget — just simply pay a dollar fine."

The mayor said he felt sure doubling the fine would convince meter-feeders that they should be parked off the street.

An approach to the Downtown Businessmen's Association for an opinion on the proposed fine increase had failed to bring a response, the mayor said in an interview.

NO ANSWER

"I asked the downtown people what they thought of my idea but they haven't answered my letter. I was hoping they'd tell me that they'd back the idea of putting the overtime parking fine up to $2."

Later this year the Downtown Businessmen's Association will be pushing for an affirmative vote to clear the way for a new 400-car parking facility on Johnson Street.

In the past the association has asked for action to eliminate the all-day on-street parker in the downtown area.

PETERSON PRESSES QUEBEC

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Tuesday he isn't satisfied with a letter from Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul explaining the beating of a B.C. Civil Servant in Quebec City Feb. 1.

He said he does not want to make details of the explanation public at this time because he wants to give the Quebec minister a chance to provide "further information I will request of him" in the beating of Walter Redel, B.C. lands director, while on government business in Quebec.

Redel was pistol-whipped by police after being mistaken for a bank robber.

Peterson said he would send a telegram to Paul asking for more information.

Redel underwent surgery to treat a cracked bone above one eye which resulted from the beating.

Suspect Jumps Into Harbor

City police nabbed a robbery suspect who jumped into the Inner Harbor shortly before noon today to evade capture.

The chase followed a robbery at one of the shops in Bastion Square. Preliminary reports indicated two youths fled after grabbing $40 from the till in Bonnie's Boutique.

The suspect jumped into the water and swam to the Department of Transport docks near the Johnson Street bridge where he was arrested by officers.

At noon police were still combing the area for the second thief.

Early indication were the pair may have attempted an earlier grab-and-run theft at one of the other shops in the square.

Three burglars early this morning also broke into the Rice Bowl, 2656 Quadra, and stole about $200 from proprietor Don Lim.

Lim was assualted and was forced to hand over the money. They escaped, but police obtained a good description of the men.

MOST IN PROVINCE

City Leads in New Houses

Metropolitan Victoria was the only large centre in the province to show an increase in dwelling starts last month, a marked contrast to the rest of Canada.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. B.C. region reports the entire gain in housing starts for January, compared with January 1969, is attributable to Victoria, which had 170.6 per cent increase.

Vancouver and all other B.C. centres of more than 10,000 population reported declines, as did all other CMHC regions reporting across the country.

In metro Victoria — including six organized areas, Indian reserves and unorganized territory to Langford — there were 525 new housing starts compared with 194 in the first month of 1969. The gain was due entirely to new rental accommodation, CMHC said.

The latter rose by 380.8 per cent from 94 a year ago to 452 units last month. Single family homes dropped 27 per cent from 100 to 73.

CMHC says the Victoria area had 3,744 dwelling starts in 1969 and 2,687 completions. In January 1970 there were 2,472 units under construction in this area compared with 1,246 in the same month a year ago.

B.C. as a whole had 1,505 new housing starts last month, a 19 per cent increase from 1,264 in January 1969. The provincial rate of completions was 84.8 per cent above the same month last year and the inventory of new units under construction was 13,769, up from 10,000 in the month last year.

Vancouver's decline was marginal, from 978 to 950 new housing starts in January, mostly in the homeowner sector, with rental accommodation hardly changed at 658 unit starts against 664 last year.

The rest of the province showed a 67.4 per cent drop from 92 to 30 units in the same period.

Market conditions in the two metropolitan areas appear to be quite different. Victoria showed the highest inventory of completed but unoccupied dwelling units since December of 1966, 32.5 per cent higher than in January 1969.

Completions in the capital were up 135.6 per cent for a total of 271 units and producing an inventory of 435 units.

One-Day Reprieve On Licence Plates

You have until 5 p.m. Saturday to get 1970 licence plates for your car, truck, trailer or motorcycle.

B.C. Motor Vehicles Branch today announced extension of the deadline from 5 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Saturday. The issuing office, behind the Legislative Buildings on Belleville, will open at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Chauffeur licences will also be issued during those hours, but there will be no driver examinations Saturday.

It is expected more than 120,000 licence plates will have been sold by 5 p.m. Saturday — an increase of at least 10 per cent from 1969.

Computer figures show 108,720 licences were issued up to Feb. 19, including 77,274 passenger cars, 16,996 commercial vehicles, 2,140 motorcycles and 12,310 traliers.

The municipal office at Sidney will also open for the issue of licences Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Municipal licences for commercial vehicles will be available at Vietoria city hall and Saanich municipal hall from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IF YOU ARE OF A MIND to hear a soldier's tale, listen while Second World War veteran Jim Short of 1014 Burdett Avenue recalls a non-meeting with a famed Irishman that landed him in one guardhouse, saved him from another, and brought him a rare souvenir.

Jim Short's person fails to match his name. He is a large, vigorous, mustache-sporting Victorian of 52, very straight in the back and wide in the shoulders. Though his war is a long way behind him, he still retains something of the military look.

We met first on the party fishing vessel Lakewood, where Jim was then helping tourists to bait hooks and untangle gear. But it was only this week that he told me about his message from George Bernard Shaw.

The year was 1940, and Jim a 21-year-old private of our first wave. He had crossed from Canada with Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. In that summer of training and waiting, off-duty time hung heavy.

One idle hour in holding unit Camp Borden, he came on a newspaper piece about Shaw. It gave the playwright's address — 'Shaw's Corners, Ayot St. Lawrence, Hertfordshire'.

"What we should do," Jim suggested to Princess Pats Private Jack Scholey, "is go pay him a call."

As Jim explains it now, they were young, and not of a mind to let difficulties stand in their way. Also, they had 24 hours to kill. So they took off from Borden in Hampshire, hitchiked into London, and out again along the Great North Road.

The day was well along when they arrived at Shaw's retreat. Disappointment waited them. The great man was sojourning in Whitehall.

But Shaw's housekeeper was kind to the soldiers from Canada. She invited them in and gave them tea, then insisted that they leave a note for her employer.

This Jim did. Then the pair started back to camp, which they figured on reaching with time to spare.

"We got a lift from a corporal," Jim remembers. "He became suspicious because we didn't have our respirators as required. The corporal began to ask uncomfortable questions. When he learned we'd taken off from Borden without a pass, he delivered us to the guardroom at Hatfield Hospital."

Next morning, the two arrived under escort at Borden, to be marched before their company commander. But let Jim tell it.

"He asked what we had to say for ourselves. I got as far as telling him 'We went up to see George Bernard Shaw', then he stopped me with lifted hand.

" 'Hold it!' he said. 'That's a new one. I'm so sick of hearing tired old stories that I'm willing to accept a fresh one at face value. Case explained!' ".

Did GBS answer the note? No, not exactly. But Jim and his friend were talking up their attempt a few weeks later — and absorbing heavy kidding — when a postcard arrived from Shaw's Corners.

'Mr. Bernard Shaw engaged in heavy literary tasks . . . resolutely abstains from private correspondence . . .' and so on in the firmest of terms.

However, a hand-written screed small, black and positive, occupied all areas that the formal print left bare.

"In reply to an undated letter just discovered: I am painfully conscious — being a shy sort of man — of my position as one of the sights of this country; and it serves me right if people gaze at me and whisper my hissing name as I pass. But I have too few years to live (perhaps none) to allow even the Canadian contingent, much less the whole British army, more than a passing glance.

"Just count up what it would mean if you all came to tea with me. No more plays, no more prefaces, no more hours off parade all to myself. Spare me.

G. Bernard Shaw."

And in a skinny line across the other end of the card: "Still, your adventures made a good story for me."

Jim let me study this Shavian gesture with its kind touch added for the benefit of a Canadian far from home. Then he said, "He didn't answer the note, you see, but I wrote a letter when we got back. I told him about the night in the guardhouse, and what our company commander said. It must have amused him."

Shaw, despite his predicted few years or perhaps none to live, survived with vinegary stubborness until 1950. Private Jack Scholey of the Princess Pats bought it in Sicily. But Jim Short came home to Victoria with stories to tell, and Shaw's note to back up this one of them.

What's that message and signature worth? He doesn't know, and neither do I. But perhaps some reader can enlighten him.

Punishment Changes

ST. GEORGE'S (Reuters) — The Grenada government said Tuesday it will introduce legislation soon calling for flogging by the cat-o'-nine-tails for such offences as larceny, abusive and obscene language and disorderly conduct.

Science Commitment Needed—Chemist

Scientists can no longer live in ivory-tower isolation, Dr. Norman Grace, national president of the Chemical Institute of Canada, said Tuesday.

"It is time to commit our best brains where they are most needed," Dr. Grace told the Institute's Vancouver Island section in his annual address to 40 members of the group at Royal Roads.

"They are needed to solve the problems of the people as never before."

Dr. Grace said SCITEC, a national organization of Canadian scientists, engineers and technologists recently formed by professional societies, is now prepared to advise government on science policy in the national interest.

"It will also explain science and technology to the general public. The problems to be faced today are too complex and involve too many disciplines to be dealt with in traditional ways," Dr. Grace said.

RESULTS RELEASED ON GRADE 12 EXAMS

Results of Grade 12 department of education examinations written in January were released Monday and students are expected to have their marks by mid-week.

The January tests, conducted for the first time this year, were designed to assist schools using a semester system in the programming of students. Last September about 45 secondary schools began the school year on the semester system.

Education Minister Brothers said that 4,001 examinations were written in eleven Grade XII examinable courses.

Pair Rescued, Buried 24 Hours

From AP-Reuters

RECKINGEN (CP) — A Paris dentist and his wife, buried under an avalanche for nearly 24 hours, were dug out alive today while rescue teams continued to search for 19 persons missing in Alpine snowslides that hit this Swiss Alpine village and the French town of Lans-le-Villard Tuesday. The slides left at least 23 persons dead.

The French couple were the last two listed as missing in Lans-le-Villard, where an avalanche killed eight persons and injured eight.

Their calls for help were heard by firemen and soldiers working in the wreckage of the Hotel Grand du Signal.

Pneumatic hammers were used to get through the hard packed snow to their second-floor room. The shock of the avalanche had thrown them underneath a bed, which then protected them.

TWO OTHERS FOUND

Earlier in the day, two others listed as missing had been found behind a few planks which they had pushed together to shelter themselves.

The biggest toll was in Reckingen where a huge snowslide roared into the village at dawn and buried 50 persons.

Twenty-one of the victims were pulled from the snow alive, but one died during the night. By dawn today 14 bodies had been found and police said there was virtually no hope for the 15 still buried.

Non-stop snowfalls and shifting temperatures caused slides throughout the Alps. The Swiss resort of Zematt was isolated when an avalanche cut the railway to the valley and helicopters flew out vacationers due to return home. A slide buried 14 skiers in Zermatt, but 10 dug themselves out and the other four were rescued.

Some 16,000 tourists and villagers were snowbound in western Austria after heavy snowfalls and numerous avalanches blocked road and rail communication in the Tyrol and Vorarlberg provinces.

FLIGHTS HINDERED

An emergency relief centre set up by the provincial government in Lans-le-Villard was unable to provide immediate help to many of the isolated winter resorts as adverse weather conditions ruled out helicopter flights to supply food and airlift tourists out of the area.

At Zuers, a snowslide hit part of the Piz Buin Hotel burying Juan Szaszak, 31, and his 24-year-old wife Liliane. While Szaszak himself was rescued after 15 minutes, his wife was dug out more than one hour later.

She was placed in an oxygen tent, in critical condition.

Rescue workers at Reckingen said the snow was like cement and that picks often were ineffective.

Outdoor Courses Offered

A new batch of spring courses offered by the Saanich Peninsula school board's adult education division are due to begin during the first week of March.

With the onset of milder weather some of the new courses are aimed at adults who want to pursue outdoor activities.

Better Boating, to begin March 2, is recommended by the B.C. Safety Council. Instructor is Clint Clive of the Saanich Peninsula Power Squadron.

Other outdoor courses are golf lessons and Saturday morning sailing lessons.

Back in the classroom these activities will be offered: bonsai, flower arranging, pattern drafting, easy sewing, woodcarving and sculpture, defensive driving and driver education and training.

Adult education director Frank Baxter reports a record enrolment of 1,025 since September in the district's 65 courses.

Enrolment for January and February was 284 in 17 classes.

Information on new courses can be obtained from school board headquarters in Sidney.

Avalanche Sweeps Baby To Safety

RECKINGEN (AP) — "Like a ship bobbing on the sea," the wooden cradle with 11-months-old Ursula Carlen inside rode the avalanche that buried most of her family in Reckingen Tuesday.

Today a neighbor, Christian Steffen, 35, told the story of the baby's escape:

"A few yards away huge masses of snow swept past. Then I saw a wooden cradle. Like a ship bobbing on the sea, it raced past me.

"When I reached the cradle . . . I immediately recognized Ursula — not even a hair on her head was out of place."

The baby's uncle, woodcarver Gregor Jerjen, 37, said the huge snowslide "passed right through the family's house, completely flattening and burying it, and carried the crib along with it."

From the snow rescuers dug the bodies of Ursula's mother and her six-year-old sister. The baby's two brothers, four and five, are missing. Her father is in hospital, badly injured.

Haddock Seeks Conference With Loffmark

At present plans for a proposed new hospital adjoining the existing hospital site are being delayed pending a decision on the routing of Belleville Street from its Blanshard Street intersection.

The city wants Belleville extending through the grounds of St. Ann's Academy to link up with Fairfield and provide a cross city traffic route.

Loffmark has expressed opposition to the proposal and has suggested that the city reroute Belleville around the hospital site.

Consulting architects studying the site stated last year that they were in complete disagreement with the city's proposal. They later deleted their objection from their feasibility study report and stated that they could "live with the Belleville Street extension."

PAY THEIR SHARE

Haddock said this morning he is positively in favor of Belleville Street going through the academy grounds.

"But if the minister is unalterably opposed to the idea, then we have to come up with something else," he said. "And if that something else means taking the road around the hospital with an overpass-underpass at Blanshard that's what we'll have to do."

"But," Haddock added, "I would never agree to that unless the entire region shared the cost of building that overpass-underpass. After all it's a regional hospital and a regional problem. If we have to take that road right around, then everybody has to pay their share.

"It certainly would be a charge the city paid in full."

Haddock said he was convinced that Loffmark was open to sound suggestions.

"I don't think he's closed his mind," he said. "He's open to reason.

"I'm hoping to get a meeting with him soon to see if we can't resolve the problem. We need those beds and just have to get on with the job of building them."

New Vaccine For Measles To Come Soon

A new vaccine against German measles could be available locally this spring.

The disease is a common and a mild one unless contracted by pregnant women. It can then lead to deafness, blindness, mental retaradtion and heart defects in their unborn children.

The new vaccine was first licensed in the U.S. late last year and two manufacturers have applied to sell it in Canada, Dr. Anthony Larsen, provincial epidemilogist, said today.

—There are indications their licences could be approved later this spring.

Dr. Larsen emphasized that the vaccine is not one which would be given to women already pregnant.

That would defeat its purpose, exposing the unborn children to all the dangers German measles brings to pregnancy because a vaccine is made from the germ itself, weakened to enable the body to develop its own immunity.

Dr. Larsen said that for safety's sake any public health program using the new vaccine could likely involve giving it to children only.

Adult women getting the vaccine from their own doctors would have to be strictly advised to avoid pregnancy for at least three months afterward.

There are two types of measles and a vaccination program against Rubeola, the more severe of the two, has been in progress in B.C. for several years.

The other is Rubella or German measles and the vaccine for this assumes added importance as an epidemic is possible in North America next winter.

Students Zero In On Insecticides

Local high school students will be knocking on doors April 11 in a drive to collect weed-killers and insecticides considered dangerous to the environment.

Main organizer is Mount View Student Kim Smith, chairman of an inter-high school group called Students Promoting a Clean Environment (SPACE).

Smith said Tuesday the group plans to list names of harmful chemicals together with acceptable substitutes.

Mayors of the four Greater Victoria municipalities will be asked to provide transportation to deliver collected chemicals from the high schools to the department of recreation and conservation for disposal.

'Must Enforce' Restraint Call

SASKATOON (CP) — The federal government's prices and incomes commission is looking for ways to add muscle to its appeal for wage and salary restraint in the labor force, commission Chairman Dr. John Young said today.

Addressing a labor relations conference here, he said restraints already agreed to by governments and the business community cannot arrest inflation without restraint also being shown by both organized and unorganized labor.

The commission will call on industry Thursday, in advertisements appearing in every newspaper in Canada, to adhere to the plan agreed to earlier this month by 250 business leaders. The plan is to hold price increases during 1970 to something less than unavoidable cost increases, thus squeezing profit margins.

"Under present conditions, however," Dr. Young said, "observance of such an undertaking (by business) cannot possibly prevent a continued rise in the price level at a substantial rate.

"That is because labor costs account for such a substantial proportion of the operating costs of business enterprise and governments, and because labor costs are currently rising at an average rate which is much too high to be consistent with reasonable price stability."

WAGES ROSE 10 PER CENT

Union contracts signed in the last three months of 1969 called for wage increases averaging more than 10 per cent in the first year of such contracts, but productivity has been rising by an average of only three per cent, Dr. Young said.

"Pay increases substantially in excess of productivity gains simply result in a corresponding reduction in the real buying power of wages and salaries through higher prices."

The commission's objective is to slow down the rate of both prices and incomes increases, and cause as little interruption as possible to the country's total output growth, "which is, after all, the only source of improvement in the living standards of Canadians as a whole."

The commission is trying to bring about, simultaneously, a reduction in the size of both pay increases and price increases. To the extent that price increases are slowed, pay cheques will go farther. But price increases can only be slowed if the brakes are applied to rising costs, and the biggest cost factor is wages and salaries.

School Work Approved

"We did our homework and we did it fast."

Sooke school superintendent E. E. Hyndman was referring to efforts by the school board administration to get plans and working drawings for additions to several schools approved following a referendum early last year.

The work has resulted in two approvals by the provincial government treasury board announced Tuesday.

Elizabeth Fisher Junior Secondary will get a power mechanics room, two art rooms, three commercial rooms, and a library-classroom valued at $227,000.

Saseenos Elementary will get two open area classrooms to cost $40,000.

Hyndman said approval on two more schools is expected within a few days. Millstream elementary is to get three new classrooms estimated to cost $84,000, and West Coast elementary is to get three classrooms and a library to cost $100,000.

District ratepayers approved a $2,000,000 building program last year. Expenditures totalling more than $500,000 have been approved so far.

Tenders have been called on the $150,000 Port Renfrew elementary which is due to open next September.

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, sister of the Shah of Iran, was elected by acclamation Tuesday as chairman of the UN Commission on Human rights for 1970. She succeeds R. Q. Quentin-Baxter of New Zealand.

Job Slowdown Stealing

An employee who performs at a rate below that normally demanded by his job is, in effect, stealing from his employer, F. G. Peskett, president of the Employers' Council of British Columbia, said Tuesday night.

Peskett said employers must find some means to offset new bargaining techniques used by some sections of organized labor.

These new techniques were illustrated by a recent rash of rejections in membrship votes of proposed settlements negotiated by union executives, and the use of production slowdowns.

"The membership rejection vote could become a deliberate and well-calculated negotiating tactic, Peskett told the Victoria chapter, Pacific Northwest Personnel Management Association.

Room Tax 'Won't Hurt' Tourist Industry

A room tax on Victoria accommodation "won't hurt the tourist industry one iota," contends a former travel agent who has been canvassing opinion in tourist capitals of the western states.

George Willis, who operated a business in Victoria for many years, made his report Tuesday to Victoria Chamber of Commerce sub-committee dealing with tourist and convention business prospects.

He said according to what he was able to gather in Hawaii and California, people are used to a room tax and are surprised only when it does not appear on their bills.

In Hawaii, "nobody complains about the 5 per cent tax," he said.

It is one of the proposals being considered by the chamber's tourist and convention section in a series of informal, closed meetings before recommendations are made to directors.

Willis said he is sure that more personal contact work should be done to develop tourist business in Victoria.

"I called on five travel agencies in Los Angeles and asked when was the last time they were visited by a Victoria representative. 'Never,' they said."

"The industry lacks workers," he added, citing the zeal and dedication of the late George I. Warren, former publicity commissioner.

He said an example of the type of personal contact that could be employed here is Lydia Lake, who will visit Victoria next month as part of a North American tour to promote seven Hawaiian hotels.

CARRIER STRIKE FORCE LAUNCHED

U.S. Escalates Laos War

ABOUT THAT HOUSING CRISIS. With the south end of the Island filling up so quickly, how about taking a lead from the car industry and building compact models? Or if that isn't what's going on here, then maybe some housing contractor has come up with a couple of giants, hence avoiding a big payroll. Actually, it's convicts from William Head finishing paint and stucco work on a scale-model bungalow; a shop project to add some authenticity to the Lions Club Tom Thumb safety village by the swimming pool in Colwood. Reds Command Key Plain

SAIGON (AP) — Two United States carriers with about 170 warplanes are adding their entire striking capability to air force efforts to cut North Vietnamese supply and troop infiltration corridors in Laos, informed U.S. sources in South Vietnam said tonight.

A spokesman for the U.S. 7th Fleet said no navy bombing raids had been flown against North Vietnamese positions in South Vietnam since Feb. 15. The two carriers are based in the Gulf of Tonkin.

Other sources said all of the navy air strikes are being flown in Laos, but declined to give specific target areas. The U.S. command has a policy of reporting only bombing missions in South Vietnam.

While Communist action in South Vietnam remained at one of its lowest levels of the year, attention centred on the massive American air campaign in Laos.

The aim is to slow a North Vietnamese offensive in the Plaine des Jarres area and to forestall a North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam by cutting the Ho Chi Minh Trail in eastern Laos. The North Vietnamese move war materiels and troops into South Vietnam over the Trail.

Meanwhile the North Vietnamese-Pathet Lao offensive rolled on unchecked as the defenders of Muong Soui and their families straggled back to Gen Vang Pao's headquarters at Long Cheng, 35 miles to the south.

Vang Pao is reported to have planned to reinforce the strategic mile-long airstrip and the town of Muong Soui with a battalion from the 10,000 Meo tribesmen he commands, but changed his mind when enemy ground fire prevented troop-carrying planes from landing at the field.

RATE BOOST ENSURES 'BEST FOR PROVINCE'

Effective April 1:

- Bus fares for adults will be 25 cents.
- Domestic power rates will increase an average of 15 per cent.

In accepting the rate boosts, Premier Bennett said he is working to give British Columbia "the highest and best standard of living in the world."

Kidnapped Pair Found Unharmed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The FBI reported today it found unharmed two little sisters kidnapped in Alabama and arrested one of two men charged with abducting them.

John Charles Messick, 22, of Tucson, Ariz., was arrested about 2:30 a.m. at the home of a distant relative in Liberty, Mo., a Kansas City suburb, the FBI said.

With him, the FBI reported, were three-year-old Tina Cain and her two-year-old sister, Tiffany, the daughters of an oil worker from Butler, Ala.

Donald Bradford Lee Jones, 23, also charged in state and federal kidnapping warrants issued Tuesday night in connection with the Monday abduction, was still being sought.

POILE HIRED, CROZIER FIRED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Crozier was fired by the National-Hockey-League bound Vancouver Canucks today for "rank insubordination" and replaced as coach and general manager by Bud Poile, late of the Philadelphia Flyers.

Thomas K. Scallen, Canucks' president, told a news conference the club had planned to retain Crozier as coach and general manager with Poile as "assistant to the president with responsibility for overall supervision."

Guerrillas May Halt Air Sabotage

Times News Services

Arab guerrilla organizations urgently reviewed today their policy of striking at Israel by attacking civilian aircraft abroad, a review brought on by the growing world-wide campaign to safeguard air travel from sabotage and hijackings.

At the United Nations in New York, Secretary-General Thant planned to hold priority talks with key delegates and his own top aides on the air security issue. He returned to New York Tuesday night after cutting short a visit to Burma.

The United States threw its weight behind calls by Israel, Switzerland and other countries for emergency talks on air security following the crash Saturday of a Swissair jetliner, killing 47 persons, and an explosion aboard an Austrian airliner the same day.

OTTAWA AGREES

In Ottawa, Transport Minister Don Jamieson told the Commons that Canada will take part in any talks initiated by any country to safeguard air travel.

In Montreal, meanwhile, a spokesman for Air Canada said that a 48-hour embargo has been placed on all freight destined for Israel.

The spokesman said the embargo, which began earlier Tuesday, includes "unaccompanied luggage."

Pompidou Stresses Mid-East

WASHINGTON (UPI)— French President Georges Pompidou told a joint session of Congress today that a Middle East peace settlement must include a renunciation of force by both sides and a solution to the problem of the Arab refugees from Palestine.

He told the senators and house members that France reaffirms "the right of the state of Israel not only to existence but also to security" from its Arab neighbors.

Pompidou made the Middle East situation a highlight of his prepared speech to congress but he also touched on the outlook for the United States in the Vietnam war.

He said that the French government has at times regretted the length of the negotiations and "wondered whether the paths followed had always been the speediest and surest."

"But I know, from having observed it just yesterday, the will to peace which guides the president of the United States," the French leader said.

IN MIND

Pompidou made no specific references to French experiences in fighting in Vietnam and Algiers but he apparently had them in mind as he gave this word of advice to the United States regarding Vietnam.

"I know — because France has experienced it—how difficult it is to end such conflicts and that the stronger a people, the greater the effort required, but also the greater the honor won. Allow me, as a friend, to tell you that the end of the war in Vietnam, for the United States, will be the most precious of victories — a victory won first over oneself."

The French president, who has been assailed in this country for the sale of Mirage jet planes to Libya, said in his discussion of the Middle East that Israel had achieved "undeniable success on the battlefield."

Bank Robbers Snatch $7M

TORONTO (CP) — Bank robbers took nearly $7,000,000 from a branch of the Bank of Montreal at Bay and Breadalbane streets in midtown Toronto today. Early reports said three men were involved in the theft of $52,255 in cash and about $6,744,000 in cheques.

NUCLEAR POWER PLANT ON ISLAND

Bennett Seeks Ottawa Aid

B.C. is asking Ottawa for help in a proposal to build a nuclear power generating station on southern Vancouver Island, Premier W. A. C. Bennett said in the legislature Tuesday.

B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said later the $150 million plant, a public proposal of his for some years, might be built in the Duncan area to provide power to Vancouver Island and surplus for the lower mainland. It could be in operation by 1976.

The plant would produce 500,000 kilowatts of power annually.

Ottawa will be asked for low-cost loans to aid in the construction. Similar help has been made available to Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba, Shrum said.

The Duncan area would provide a site close to power transmission lines linking Vancouver Island with the Lower mainland.

Shrum said the nuclear plant would produce no danger from wastes and excess heat could be used for fish propagation or greenhouse heating.

Nuclear power appears to be the only solution to the growing need for power on Vancouver Island, where available new power sources are limited, Shrum said.

"The only other source of power left is thermal," Shrum said, pointing out that coal would have to be brought in from the East Kootenays for thermal generating plants. Air pollution would be a hazard, he added.

There is no air pollution from nuclear plants and the byproduct, plutonium, can be sold to other countries using different types of atomic reactors, he said.

There is some doubt B.C. could proceed with a nuclear plant without Ottawa's help, Shrum said, adding that Ottawa wishes to promote sale of its Atomic Energy Commission-developed reactors.

Radiation from the reactor is comparable to the radiation "you would get from a partner sleeping in a double bed," Shrum said, adding "you could safely lean up against the side of one of those reactors for your whole lifetime."

'WARM UP' FISH

Heat from a reactor, which might be a problem in a hot, dry climate such as that in the Interior, could be used to heat greenhouses or warm up cold coastal waters to aid fish propagation, he suggested.

It would take about six years to build a nuclear plant, Shrum said.

Ontario has one 200,000 kilowatt nuclear plant in operation, Shrum said.

Bennett said the official request for aid to Ottawa has not yet been made and that Hydro still has the engineering details under study.

Asked how firm the government is on a nuclear plant at this stage, Bennett replied: "This is the first time I've announced it in the legislature."

He made his remarks after both Opposition Leader Dave Barrett and Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby Edmonds) had asked whether the government is considering a nuclear power plant.

Dowding said electric power generated by nuclear plants could be produced at a three to four mill cost, comparing favorably with sources such as Peace River power which has to be delivered over long distances.

A little more than half of the power used on Vancouver Island currently is generated on the Island, mostly at the

A bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday night changes the name of provincial jails to "correctional centres" and provides increased freedom for rehabilitation of prisoners.

One section of the bill, the new Corrections Act, would enable certain prisoners be granted leave from a correctional centre, with or without escort, for "medical, educational or humanitarian reasons to assist in the rehabilitation of the inmate."

A limit of 15 days' leave applies for "humanitarian" reasons but educational or medical leave could be unlimited.

Another section would enable prisoners to take "gainful employment for wages" outside the centre for "specified periods" with the money to be used under guidance of the warden for support of the inmates' dependants or to cover costs of his travel, meals, cost of keep at the centre or other expenses.

Attorney-General Peterson, asked if the bill allowed for conjugal visits for prisoners, said it would be up to the discretion of the director of corrections.

Peterson said his department tried to make the act the most modern of its kind anywhere and described it as a consolidation of a number of improvements which have been in progress for some time.

The bill brings the probation, correctional and parole services under one agency, the B.C. Corrections Service.

He said the "greatest" emphasis of the three elements will be on probation.

CARLETON CRITICS CHARGE

Uvic President Choice 'Insult to Canadians'

By BOB MITCHELL

Hiring American administrators to head two B.C. universities was a "distinct insult to Canadians and the Canadian academic community," Carleton University English teacher Robin Matthews said here today.

Matthews, who arrived with colleague James Steele, was referring to appointments of University of Victoria president Dr. Bruce Partridge and Simon Fraser University president Dr. Kenneth Strand.

The two professors from Ottawa's Carleton University have been in the news for the last 18 months since proposing that two-thirds of faculty members at all Canadian universities should be Canadian, by birth or citizenship.

Just under 50 per cent of university teaching positions are now held by Canadians.

Uvic and SFU are the only universities in Canada with non-Canadian presidents.

"I don't think any more American presidents will be appointed," Matthews said, referring to publicity given the work of a committee of academics which was formed to study "de-Canadianization" of campuses.

"In recent years Canadian universities have been accepting American qualifications.

"President Partridge is one of those men who just shouldn't have been hired."

Matthews said hiring Partridge was an insult to Canadians because the university, in effect, was saying no Canadian was good enough to be president of Uvic.
